British Justice?

THE CLOSING months of 1985 saw eight members of the National Front facing Race Act prosecutions. Reviewing these cases it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that British Justice is coming to resemble a game of roulette: irrespective of the evidence you'll win if you're lucky, or lose if not. Since six of the eight defendents were found 'Not Guilty' we are, at least, on a small winning streak.

That isn't of course much of a consolation to Martin Wingfield, who had by far the weakest case against him of all the defendents, yet was still found guilty, or to Joe Pearce, currently serving a twelve month sentence, simply for giving minor technical advice regarding the production of the former YNF paper Bulldog.

Fortunately the results can't be cheering to the Establishment either. Prosecutions are after all brought for political reasons, and the Establishment does not enjoy the political defeat it suffers, with all the attendant publicity, whenever a jury says 'Not Guilty'. In view of the notorious unpredictability of juries in Race Act cases the State may think twice before bringing charges in future.

NEW TREND

One trend that does appear to have developed is that juries are less likely to convict following the Tottenham Riots. Perhaps those Sussex jurors who thought Martin Wingfield was 'inciting racial hatred' by suggesting that mass coloured immigration would be detrimental to Brighton would have thought again if his trial had occured after the murderous Black rampage through the Broadwater Farm Estate.

Although this shift in jury sympathies was not enough to save Joe Pearce this fact is of comparatively little political significance:– the political style of Bulldog was largely a hangover from the NF's past; it is significant that the Party stopped production of it long before Joe went to Court.

Racialism and racial hatred are two different things. For too long Nationalists have let the Establishment get away with propagating the idea that they are synonymous.

CONDEMN HATRED

From now on the National Front must state loud and clear that as White Racialists we condemn racial hatred; as White Racialists we condemn the root cause of racial animosity – enforced multi-racialism; as White Racialists we recognise the diversity of cultures that enriches this Earth and the inate racial differences that underpin that diversity; as White Racialists we hate only those politico-economic forces that would destroy all races – Black and White alike – in the name of Internationalism and Multiracialism, leaving only a world that is grey, sterile, rootless, raceless, uniform and very, very boring.

LABOUR'S SOLDIERS

IN A BIZARRE aftermath to the Tottenham race riots, the Labour-controlled London Borough of Haringey has become the first council in mainland Britain to equip itself with a paramilitary wing.

The Labour paramilitaries made their appearance at the funeral of Cynthia Jarrett, the Black woman whose death during a Police raid on her home provided the excuse for the Tottenham riot. About forty young Black men, in the familiar IRA-style uniform of black berets and sunglasses, "stewarded" the funeral. They were equipped with two-way radios and were commanded by Haringey Council "youth officers". Most were recruited from the "youth centre" on the riot-torn Broadwater Farm Estate. Though a council spokesman said the uniformed Negroes were there merely to provide "discreet stewarding", their "youth officers" were less evasive. One referred to his men as "Black soldiers", and threatened to stab a reporter from the Daily Telegraph if he took a photograph of them. The real function of his paramilitary wing was made bluntly clear by Haringey's Black Council "Leader" Bernie Grant. He warned reporters "Be careful. The youth will sort you out".

Uniformed ANC terrorist. – Will similar sights become familiar here?

SERIOUS THREAT

The recruitment of a private army by a London Borough may appear faintly comic, reminiscent of G.K. Chesterton's classic "The Napoleon of Notting Hill". Where, one asks oneself, is the Great Army of South Kensington? But in fact it is a deadly serious threat to White residents, and a flagrant breach of the 1936 Public Order Act (though the offenders have the wrong colour skin to have any worries about a prosecution such as was made against half a dozen NF Drum Corps members). Loony-Left Labour Councils are going to organise paramilitary squads of young Blacks with which to threaten those of whom they disapprove, as Bernie Grant, the Black Napoleon of Haringey, is now doing.

White residents now have little alternative to doing likewise thus leading to the ultimate Beirutisation of British politics.

Room at the Top

THE RECENT legal victory of a Bangledeshi businessman over the Government has opened yet another breach in the Tory Immigration Act which was supposed to have set a final limit on those eligible to settle here.

According to the Guardian (8.11.85) Mr Mohammed Rahman having inherited the house and businesses of his father had applied in 1980 to come here and run them but was refused entry on the grounds that immigration rules allowed only those foreigners investing in new businesses to settle. However on November 7th Mr Justice Woolf ordered the Immigration Appeal Tribunal to reconsider its decision to uphold the home office refusal to let Mr Rahman settle. Government lawyers are warning that unless the judge's interpretation is challenged in the Court of Appeal a new loophole for immigrants will have been created.

There are only two logical positions on the issue of black immigration – either it is damaging and its results should be reversed; or else it is beneficial and should therefore be unrestricted. For reasons of political expediency, successive governments have allowed limited immigration while proclaiming that unrestricted immigration is bad for race relations (without ever stating their view of the 'perfect' size of the black population in Britain).

However once it is accepted that some foreigners have a right of settlement then all subsequent attempts to set limits on immigration will fail as immigrants claim that others have the same right of settlement as them. The NF agrees with the logic, for all black immigrants have never had a moral right to settle here and they and their descendents must go home.

THE HEAD HUNTERS

A COLLEGE PRINCIPAL who had dared to deviate, if only slightly, from the multi-racialist line has come under ruthless fire from Black mobs incited by Communists and other racemixers.

In East London, Jack Fuller, Principal of Waltham Forest College, was barred from his office on October 16th by hundreds of screaming Black and Asian students at the college, bearing placards such as "Fuller shit". His crime? To write to the Times the week before, complaining of repeated thefts at his college, most of whose 6,000 students are Black or Asian, by gangs of West Indian youths from outside. He also went on to observe, after a holiday in Jamaica, that "The sort of loud, aggressive conduct seen in Brixton was there in Jamaica and the young Jamaicans committing robberies and assaults on that beautiful island could not blame White police violence or prejudice by the White majority.

However, Fuller's complaint wasn't that the Blacks were here, but that they weren't swotting hard like the Asians: "Achievement is the only way to gain acceptance, not arrogance, abuse and hostility". The Asians had "a very different attitude towards work, study and co-operation". Any lingering doubts that Fuller is not as much a multi-racialist as his opponents must be dispelled by the fact that he has an Asian, Malay, wife.

Nonetheless, the mobs are out against him, led by the College Students' Union President, Charles Anderson. An interesting change of heart by Mr. Adamson, himself Black, since his first reaction to Fuller's letter was "His statements about the situation in the college over the past three or four years are fairly accurate. Before security guards came here you used to get people coming in off the street and holding people at knife-point. Eighty per-cent of them were West Indian". Now, under pressure, he has changed his tune to "Fuller out!" The source of that pressure is not hard to find. Fuller's Deputy Principal, Michael Blagden, was not the only one to observe that Socialist Workers' Party members from outside the college were playing a leading role in the anti-Fuller demo. Once again Blacks are used as cannon-fodder by White (well, whit*ish*) Reds.

Obviously, the National Front defends the right of Mr Fuller to express his views on the race issue, though let it be quite clear we do not agree with him. However, we would ask Jack Fuller and Ray Honeyford, who now protest when multiracialist thought policemen deny their right of free speech this – Where were you when the same people were denying our rights on the issue?

"SWAMPED"

According to Home Office figures, in 1984, 1,040,000 passengers arriving from the (Black) "New Commonwealth" and Pakistan were recorded entering Britain, 95,970 were recorded leaving our country. Nobody knows what happened to the other 900,000 Blacks and Asians. The Government knows they came in: but it doesn't know they went out again. So much for the Tories' "strict Immigration controls"!

THATCHER TURNS ON HERSELF

THE 'lady who's not for turning' should be careful she's not about to tie herself up in knots. Originally elected on a promise to cut public spending and create a booming economy, the subsequent failure to create anything but mass unemployment and economic decline has led the government to proclaim how virtuous it is in actually spending so much on our behalf!

This has encouraged a widespread belief that Mrs Thatcher has made her political U-turn. The basis for the interpretation is that Treasury statistics indicate that government spending rose by nearly 4% between 1983 and 1985. The government has therefore been attempting to inflate the economy whilst proclaiming its absolute opposition to just such a policy. Now in an extraordinary volte-face Mrs Thatcher made a speech at the Guildhall congratulating herself for not cutting back public expenditure. This appears to be an attempt to rationalise the administration inability to reduce government spending without political costs such as a further rise in unemployment, and a consequent restlessness among Tory MP's fearing for the safety of their seats at the next general election.

In fact the web of government misinformation on spending is even more complicated. Despite Thatcher's new found pride in spending so much of our money, the Chancellor's recent Autumn Economic Statement appears to plan for a slightly lower level of public spending in the 1985–86 financial year. Chancellor Lawson still recognises the need to pander to those in the Tory Party who still demand ever lower government expenditure. Therefore Lawson is speeding up the planned sale of public assets, such as British Gas, so that while claiming expenditure remains high (Applause from Tory wets) Lawson can also point out that expected proceeds of £5bn from the asset sales will allow him to cut government borrowing at least for this year (muted murmurs of approval from Conservative monetarists).

MORE MISERY

This change in government economic policy may satisfy political expediency but the end result will be more misery for British people. The Chancellor's claim that the UK has enjoyed 5 years of annual 3% economic growth includes 1986, which hasn't happened yet.

Furthermore Lawson had calculated the expansion of the economy only from 1982 whereas he should be using the size of the economy in 1979 as a basis for comparison. The significant fact is of course that from 1979–1981 the economy actually shrank under the Tories by 4%. The economy did not return to its 1979 size till 1983 so it is only with 1984 and 1985 that Lawson can claim his government has presided over real economic growth.

In 1984 and 1985 there was 3% economic growth in both years – therefore over six years of Tory rule the economy has grown by about 6% from its size in 1979, a yearly growth of 1% not 3% as Lawsons claims. This is the lowest yearly growth since the war and is important since it means that even the government's attempts at reflation of the economy on the quiet has had little effect.

There are other reasons why Lawson should be ashamed to refer to a 'growth miracle' over the last few years. Half this growth has been due to the oil industry; certainly growth has only occurred in specific areas of the economy and the jobs created have quite obviously not replaced the huge numbers lost in manufacturing.

Moreover, Britain's average economic growth of 3% in 1984/85 was less due to government reflation than to the 'knock-on' effect of huge US government expenditure which has sucked in imports, including products from Britain. However Congress is now pressurising Reagan to cut government spending so as to reduce imports and this will therefore hamper continued British economic growth.

Lawson will not be able to control government spending, and in fact the government is actually intending to continue to attempt to reflate the economy by high spending, conbined with tax cuts to give people more to spend in the shops. But wait a minute, haven't we been down this economic path before. The government has abandoned monetrism in all but name but Mrs Thatcher has simply returned to a Keynesian policy of expanding demand that she has claimed long and loud doesn't work.

Genuine economic growth will only occur when Nationalist financial policies are implemented; first and foremost the banks must be nationalised, and the power of the creation of credit restored to the state. Only then can more money and credit be introduced to the economy, to stimulate growth, without creating inflation. Until then there will be nothing for the unemployed to look forward to except longer queues at the dole-offices.

Oxford No-Go

IN THE WAKE of the last Toxteth riots, a High Court judge heard an application to bring legal action against the Merseyside police.

Mr Lawrence Levy, a Cheshire jewellery salesman sought leave to apply for a declaration that it was unlawful for Mr Kenneth Oxford, the Merseyside Chief Constable, adopt a "no go" policy in Toxteth.

Police pursuing two masked robbers getaway vehicle gave up the chase when their vehicle entered Toxteth and came under fire from stone-throwing youths.

The Q.C. representing Mr Levey told the Judge, "The reason the chase was called off was because the police vehicles were entering the Toxteth area."

He also said evidence was available that the officers involved in the chase had protested at being made to retreat, "One car at least was within inches of the getaway car".

The National Front has brought the police use of 'no-go' areas to the public's attention before and will continue to do so:– for the so-called 'guardians of the community' to leave sections of that same community unprotected against widespread rioting and disorder is an inexcusable state of affairs.

Nationalism Today calls on all NF units to publicise in their local newsletters all such examples of incompetent policing, especially in cases like the above, where the Judge refused to condemn the police, being as much under the thumb of corrupt politicians as the police are.

BRITAIN FREES THE "MAD DOG"

FOR MANY years one man, Dominic "Mad Dog" McGlinchey was "the most wanted man in Ireland" and in Ulster. A psychopathic killer, who boasted to the Dublin Sunday Tribune in November 1983 that he personally had been involved in at least 30 murders and 200 other terrorist crimes, McGlinchey claimed he was "Chief of Staff" of the Irish National Liberation Army, a group of Marxist butchers who made even the Provos look tame. McGlinchey himself left the Provos because they had become, in his view, "too political and too soft".

McGlinchey ordered the blowing-up of the Droppin Well Inn in 1982, in which 17 people were killed; the sectarian gunning down of three Protestant church elders during the evening service at Darkley, Co. Armagh, in 1983, and the murder of Tory Shadow Cabinet Minister Airey Neave outside the House of Commons. McGlinchey delighted in torturing Ulster Catholics he thought were "informers", and was proud of his nickname, "Mad Dog". Even the Provos considered him insane, an opinion reinforced when one of his INLA "Active Service Units" went berserk in Divis Flats and ran around shooting at everyone indiscriminately until the Provos shot them. Among McGlinchey's followers was Trotskyite Bernadette Devlin-McAliskey, who was the INLA's "Intelligence Officer" for Co. Tyrone.

In the end, McGlinchey's rampage of blood and death was checked when the Irish Republic police arrested him in late 1982. McGlinchey's atrocities had so revolted even hardened Republicans that the Eire Government was able to take the unprecedented step of handing him over to the British authorities in Ulster. There he was convicted of murdering Mrs. Hester McMullen, the 63-year-old mother of a policeman, in March 1977. Even then McGlinchey managed to escape.

But on St. Patrick's Day, last year, in a remote farmhouse in Co. Clare, the "Mad Dog" was recaptured by Irish police after a fierce gun battle, and handed back to the British. Now, under a strict security regime, McGlinchey was, it seemed, safely behind bars. Ireland, North and South, could breathe easier: the man everyone from Ian Paisley to Gerry Adams regarded as the most dangerous killer in the country was out of the way for ever.

SENILE INCOMPETENCE

On Friday October 11th, on the orders of a British judge, Mr. Justice Gibson, Dominic McGlinchey, the Mad Dog, self-confessed multiple murderer and terrorist Leader, was released from Crumlin Road Jail, Belfast. Judge Gibson, in a fit of senile incompetence shocking even by the standards of the Belfast High Court, decided that although McGlinchey's fingerprints were on the getaway car used in the murder of Mrs McMullen, "he could have left them there whilst he was a passenger in it on another occasion". So his conviction was quashed, and the man it had taken police on both sides of the border seven years, and several lives, to catch was, as far as the British law was concerned, free to go.

Admittedly, he was rearrested and extradited to the Irish Republic to face a charge of attempting to murder a police officer. But that charge was dropped, and now the man who boasted he personally killed 30 people, sometimes by torture, faces only minor firearms and resisting arrest charges. He may well be freed soon to kill again.

It is surely madness to spend years chasing a notorious terrorist around two countries, a man branded as "Public Enemy No. 1" in both, a chase in which British and Irish policemen and civilians lost their lives, and then, having finally caught him, simply let him go on a legal technicality. Obviously, a criminal psychopath is unlikely to leave a trail of witnesses alive and willing to testify against him. But no one anywhere seriously doubts his guilt: least of all McGlinchey, who boasts of it.

This case makes a mockery of Thatcher's bombastic boasts about "the fight against terrorism" – she has allowed the worst terrorist in the country, who caused the death of her personal friend Airey Neave, to simply walk away from a British court. We in the NF, on the other hand, would have dealt with McGlinchey as mad dogs usually are dealt with – by being shot down on the spot. Although, on second thoughts, perhaps he would live a little while, until he had answered some questions. But it is not a lease of life he would enjoy, at all . . . .

Fowl Fight

ACCORDING TO the police, the RSPCA and the League Against Cruel Sports, the horrific 'sports' of dog and cock fighting are on the increase in Britain. These 'sports' are carried out in many locations throughout the country. The main areas mentioned in an inside report received by the RSPCA are Shropshire, the West Midlands and Leicester. Scotland Yard recently announced that they had information linking organised crime and gambling with these illegal 'sports'.

The Old English Game cockerel and sometimes the smaller Old English bantam cockerel are the two most popular birds for cock fighting. The cockerels are very often fitted with steel blades on their legs. They can easily be recognised because the fleshy comb on their heads and the wattles under their chins are removed to prevent injuries in which the bleeding would spoil the birds fighting performance.

The animal welfare organisations and the police are finding it more and more difficult to track down and even contemplate stopping these barbaric practices. Cock fights have always been notoriously hard to stop. They can be held virtually anywhere. Recent cases have included fights being conducted in sheds, furniture vans and even on a trawler.

But on top of this two new factors have emerged. One of them is the hijacking of these 'sports' by organised crime. The police admit that they can arrest the small time gamblers at the few fights that they get to know about, but the people organising these events on such a massive scale cannot be touched, because they carefully keep their distance while reaping in the profits.

POWERLESS

The second factor is the involvement of immigrants. In Leicester and other places with large Asian populations, the League Against Cruel Sports have admitted that they are powerless to do anything about the fighting. Due to the Asians natural inclinations of sticking together within their community and shunning outsiders, the LACS and the police cannot get any information about the fights although they know for a fact that it is widespread and big business within immigrant communities.

After the fight against ritual slaughter – which we are glad to say looks like being won – the animal welfare groups have lost all heart for another fight with the Asian communities. They have readily admitted that they are very worried, and do not want to invoke more accusations of "racialism". They have sold out to the immigrants.

Only the National Front will stay by our principles and raise the standard of opposition to dog and cock fighting, whoever it is being carried out by. We are the only people who will not bow down from pressure, whoever applies it. To do so is the day our cause withers and dies.

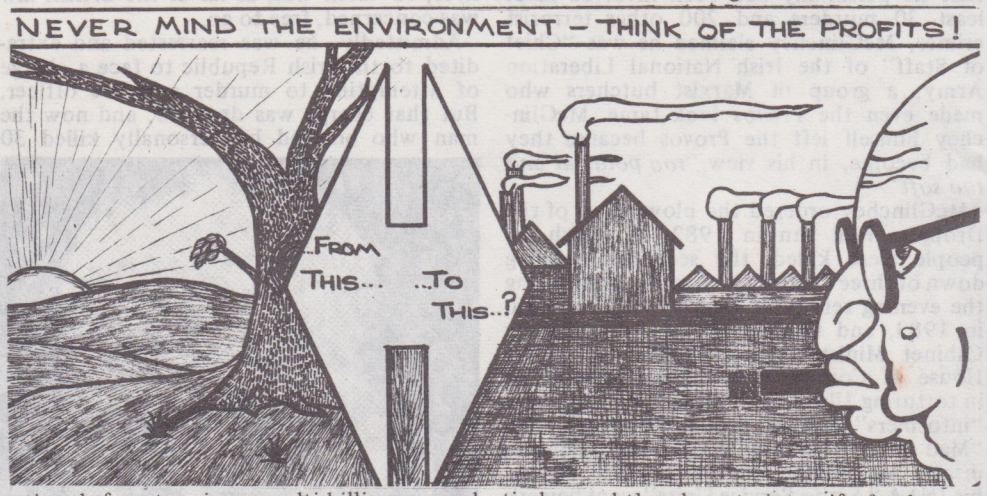
Tropical Tremors

MORE than 27 million acres of tropical forest, an area larger than Australia, are being destroyed every year by uncontrolled felling and grazing according to a new international study published recently. The report entitled — Tropical Forests: A Call for Action — goes on to warn that if deforestation is carried on at the present rate, 10—20 per-cent of the Earth's plant and animal life will be annihilated by the year 2000.

As well as destroying the natural beauty of the earth and its varied wildlife, the mass destruction of tropical forests will ultimately have a serious affect on climatic conditions, and will in all probability destroy the ability of the earth to sustain most sorts of life — including our own. This is known as the 'greenhouse affect'. One estimate supposes that if half the carbon in the Amazon were released over the next twenty years, and half remained in the atmosphere, carbon dioxide levels would rise by roughly %5. This would probably be a big enough increase to raise global temperatures by 2—3 degrees Centigrade. A temperature rise such as this would cause mass melting of the North Atlantic and West Antartic ice sheets with consequent flooding of a large scale. Similarly, large scale deforestation may affect the climate by interfering with the atmospheric heat balance, as less solar energy is absorbed by the dwindling forest cover. The results of mass deforestation on a world scale can easily be imagined.

BLAME

The blame for this mass destruction and murder, not to mention a possible world catastrophe in the years to come, lies squarely on the shoulders of the multinationals and the Capitalist System in general. International forestry is a multi-billion pound business, involving fast and easy profits from exploitation and various mass fiddles to avoid tax-duty and to exploit transfer pricing policies. Multinationals with vertically intergrated timer industries set up specialist subsidiaries. These more often than not have high debt-to-equity ratios with the consequent high interest payments going to the overseas lenders. Products are then sold between the companies at almost non-existant profit making prices. Both of these 'legal' fiddles enable the companies to avoid tax and export duties. Needless to say, the tropical forest nations gain virtually nothing from the revenue generated from their timber and they have to intensify further use of the forests to enable their economies to survive and to enable their people to eat. The multinationals further intensify the problem with the exploitation of the vast mineral reserves that many of these countries have, and the subsequent roads and industrialisation that is entailed, which the forests have to make way for! All this in the name of gold!



Dealers in the Dead

UNBORN HUMAN BABIES, the victims of abortion, are being sold for experiments to cosmetics manufacturers, it was revealed in Strasbourg late last year. Calling on the Council of Europe to ban this evil trade, West German Social Democrat M.P Horst Haase revealed that in March 1981 French customs officials siezed a consignment of human embryos which had been sold by the Communist Rumanian Government to an un-named "manufacturer of beauty products". In 1983 the Californian police siezed 500 dead babies intended for use in cosmetics production. But there is no clear law on the disposal of babies murdered by abortionists and their sale to cosmetics firms goes on.

Unbelievably, the Council of Europe stalled on Herr Haase's call to ban the international dead baby trade, and "all commercial and industrial uses of human embryos". They merely referred it to a committee, although in the past the Council of Europe has rushed to issue all manner of "declarations" and "directives" in such fields as race and immigration policy. The West German M.P. blamed "lobbyists for the pharmaceutical industry" but vowed to carry on his fight.

MURDER

Abortion, the murder of unborn babies for no better reason than that their births would be socially or personally inconvenient, is evil enough. But to then conduct an international trade in the bodies of these slaughtered innocents between Communist dictatorships and Capitalist multinationals in order to develop a new brand of lipstick is just sick.

Merchant Mobsters

ONE OF America's leading banks, the Crocker National Bank of San Fransisco, in which the Midland Bank has a large stake, has been fined 2.25 million dollars for failing to report large transactions of cash. This fact is nothing new in banking circles. However, Crockers' crookery is slightly different this time.

First it was not just one or two crooked deals, but a staggering 7,800 violations of America's banking laws involving 4 billion dollars.

Worse though is the strong belief that much of the money laundered by the Bank is the proceeds of heroin smuggling in Hong Kong. No wonder that the Assistant Treasury Secretary was forced to admit that Crockers' illegal dealings over the last four years were "systematic and pervasive".

SKULLDUGGERY

But Crocker is not alone in such skullduggery. Recently four New York banks; Manufacturers Hanover, Chemical, Chase Manhattan and Irving Trust, were also caught with their fingers in the till and fined. And the "distinguished" Bank of Boston was fined for 1,163 violations which were directly linked to the laundering of 1.2 billion dollars of Mafia money.

But this is only the tip of the iceberg. How much more wheeler-dealing and corruption remains is anyone's guess. But the above is yet another example of the corrupt Capitalist System — of which the banks are the central lynchpins — which we have to endure. That System stinks — it's time the chain was pulled on it!

NATIONALISTS ADVANCE!

IN SOUTH AFRICA...

IN THE WAKE of the recent South African by-elections it has become clear that the ruling Nationalist Party is losing the support of its traditional Afrikaner supporters and is therefore becoming reliant upon white, English speaking voters to stay in power. The NP has lost thousands of Afrikaner supporters since the 1982 election when it had the loyalty of an estimated two thirds of 'Afrikanerdom'.

In the October by-elections, apart from losing its Sasolburg seat to the radical Herstigte Nationale Party, the NP also suffered drastically reduced majorities when retaining seats at Springs, Vryburg and Bethleham, against the HNP's ally, the Conservative Party. Only in the Port Natal seat did the NP gain an increased majority, and significantly the English speaking white vote was only important here. Though the Nationalist Party's total vote in the five seats actually increased by 3% this gain was at the expense of the New Republic Party and the Progressive Federal Party, both of whom support a non-Apartheid multi-racial South Africa. The militantly racial separatist HNP and pro-apartheid Conservative Party enjoyed a 200% rise in support due to the shift in Afrikaner loyalties.

Prime minister Botha dismissed the growing electoral threat to the NP by claiming "positive support" for his policies. He undoubtedly will continue his 'twin-track' policy of violently suppression black disorder to quieten an increasingly unimpressed white population, and offering limited political power to blacks within one multi-racial South Africa. Botha's objectives are predetermined by the desire of his capitalist masters to prevent true separate racial development, in order to exploit a pool of cheap white and black labour. Typical of his attempt to obscure this aim Botha made the suitably uncontroversial statement that "we will have to continue to work and build towards a peaceful South Africa for all population groups in a responsible manner".

RADICALISATION

An analysis of the by-election results portray a profound radicalisation in the views of white voters. Most English speakers are presently putting their faith in the 'gradual reformism' of Botha's NP. Afrikaners and the white working class are giving their allegiance to the advocates of racial separation. As NP minister of Law and Order Mr Louis le Grange was claiming that violence in black townships was at a very low ebb, triumphant HNP candidate in Sasolburg Mr Louis Stofberg proclaimed that his victory "heralded the resurrection of the Afrikaner nation as a free and independent entity".

If that results in the true separation of the races of South Africa into distinct nation-states free of influence by any other culture or by international capitalism then that resurrection is in the interests of all races in South Africa.

...AND IN SWITZERLAND

THE RADICAL, environmentally-aware racial nationalist National Action Party, whose growing strength in Switzerland we reported in NT No. 34, continues to advance. In Geneva, home of several United Nations agancies and with a 35% Immigrant population and hence a heartland of the foes of the anti-UN, anti-Immigration NAP, the NAP's local wing, Vigilance, scored resounding successes in recent elections.

In elections to the Grand Council, the parliament of the Geneva Canton (one of the 22 semi-independent cantons which make up Switzerland), the NAP's Vigilance wing tripled its representation, depriving the ruling Entente coalition of Radicals, Liberals and Christian Democrats of their majority for the first time since 1933. NAP–Vigilance now holds 19 of the 100 seats in the Geneva Parliament, putting the racial nationalists level with the Liberals, the "bankers' party" and one seat ahead of the Socialists. Fighting on a radical nationalist platform, NAP–Vigilance became the most popular party in the city of Geneva itself, topping the poll in 15 arrondissements, including traditional Socialist strongholds such as St. Gervais and St. Jean. As newly-elected NAP–Vigilance deputy Francois Thorens put it: "I was hoping for a success, but nothing like this". Commenting on the city's rejection of its traditional multinational Capitalist haven role in favour of the ruralist NAP, the French daily Le Monde rightly said: "Geneva hs decided to close its cash registers".

PROSECUTED

Meanwhile, mass popular pressure forced the Swiss Establishment to back down earlier in October and abandon its plan to strip the youngest of the NAP's five Federal MP's, Markus Ruf, of his parliamentary immunity so he could be prosecuted for leaking a confidential Government document showing just how much Afro-Asian Immigrant "refugees" were costing the Swiss taxpayer.

Commenting on recent developments and future, NAP President Rudolf Keller said: "We have had a breakthrough. We should do well in the Lausanne election.. And we think we are going to be the top party in the Berne Canton and Zurich city elections in the spring". On the NAP-sponsored referendum on reducing the country's Immigrant population drastically, due in 1988, Herr Keller stated: "There is every reason now why we should win it. The Swiss have served notice that something must be done about foreigners". Before then, the NAP hopes to win a massive "No" vote on a referendum on Swiss UN membership next March. The NAP opposes Swiss membership in any international body or superpower-sponsored "alliance" which diminishes Swiss national sovereignty. More power to their elbow!

THE FICTION NOT THE FACTS

OUR old friend, Robert "Jan Ludvik Hoch" Maxwell, publisher of the Daily Maxwell (sorry Daily Mirror) gave an interesting interview over the Kremlin-controlled Polish State Radio.

In it he said that Solidarity was no longer a national movement and that in future his Mirror group newspapers would be giving less space to it, and that the Solidarity problem had been resolved.

This sort of talk would have gone down with Polish workers like a ton of bricks.

Of course the reason that Maxwell/Hoch gave such an interview could have nothing to do with the fact that he had just acquired the right to publish General Jaruzelski's speeches or that at the time he was seeking rights to sell his vast range of products in Eastern Europe?

Of course not!

'The Political Soldier'

GRAHAM GILLMORE has been a member of the National Front since 1981. He has held several Branch and Regional positions, and was a candidate in the 1983 General Election.

In this article he gives a fascinating insight into life in various Armed Forces in Southern Africa.

An article written by Graham, on South Africa's 44 Parachute Brigade appears in the January 1986 issue of The Elite magazine.

MY INTRODUCTION to Africa came while serving with the Grenadier Guards. We had gone to Kenya on a six week training exercise, in order to give us experience operating in different types of terrain. We travelled far to desert areas, hacked through thick jungle, froze in the snows of Mount Kenya and navigated mile after mile in the more common bush land.

Valuable military lessons were learnt by the all white Guards battalion but more than that it showed us at first hand day to day life in a black African country.

In 1977 I left the British Army and flew to Rhodesia where I had applied to join the army and had been accepted into the Rhodesian Light Infantry. With hindsight my decision to serve Rhodesia was right; if I had not gone I would have regretted it for the rest of my life.

Up to this point I had no personal contact with the National Front, I had voted for the Party but had not joined them, nor did I know any members.

COURAGE

Once in Rhodesia and working in Support Commando, R.L.I. I met some NF members, notably Ian Trayner, among the many non-Rhodesians in R.L.I. Ian had an excellent reputation for courage in action: he killed a vast number of terrorists and was awarded the Bronze Cross of Rhodesia on 10th January 1981 for gallantry. Tragically he was killed only a few months later.

With British and American Governments' help Rhodesia fell to the Marxists and a great country ceased to exist in April 1981. I returned to England and it was now after reading a National Front News that I joined the Party and became active in the Hammersmith and Fulham Branch.

In November of the same year I again flew to Southern Africa, this time to join the South African Army where I had heard that a pathfinder company was being formed at 44 Parachute Brigade from foreigners who had left the Rhodesian Army at the end of the war. I was accepted into the company as a sergeant with radio communications as my specialist skill.

On patrol in Angola

Most of the men who made up the pathfinders were old friends who I had worked with for years. There was no single reason for any of us joining the South African Army, it was a mixture of opposing communism and seeking adventure, everyone's personal circumstances were different and political beliefs were not always the motivating force; we had all tasted the excitement that comes with danger.

KEEN INTEREST

From the start there was keen interest in the National Front, I was in contact with the Hammersmith and Fulham NF Branch Organiser who kept me up to date with the Party's news and well stocked with literature. Apart from myself there were two other ex-NF members and they straight-away rejoined.

The bulk of the pathfinder company were British, Rhodesian and American, but we also had many men from Canada, Australia and New Zealand as well as some from Germany, France and Belgium, some of whom had political ties. The rest looked with interest at our literature and wanted to learn as much about us as they could.

Training in the early months of 1981 prepared us for vehicle operations into Angloa in search of communist backed S.W.A.P.O. terrorists. The men also developed a political awareness that resulted in thirteen new memberships for the Party.

We started our training on the banks of the Limpopo River which is the northern border with Zimbabwe. From there the men had to pass a two week selection course held in the Drakenburg Mountains in Natal – this ensured only the toughest were accepted into the pathfinders. We then deployed in South West Africa with our fighting vehicles to prepare for active service.

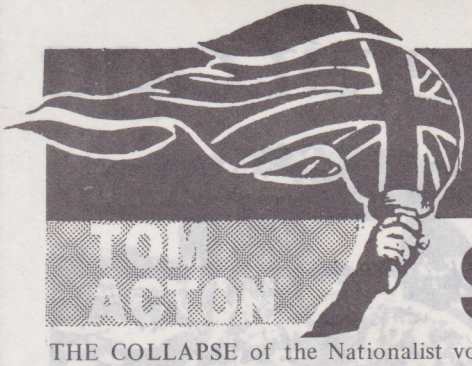
This work took all our energy and it was not our place to influence the politics of South Africa so we quietly maintained a loyalty to the National Front and got on with our job.

GRAFFITI

We had one funny moment while on operations in Angola during Operation Protia in August 1981. On the night of 25th August we had a very successful contact with a convoy of F.A.P.L.A. (Angolan Army) in Russian vehicles. We inflicted heavy casulties on them and captured all their vehicles with no injuries to ourselves. The following day we moved back to the town of Zangongo to have a rest, a meal and a good clean up. We set up in part of the F.A.P.L.A. barracks and during the course of the day graffiti and great artistic murals appeared on the walls – some were personal attacks on President dos Santos and others were more general to the Angolan people; prominent were National Front slogans and artwork. At last light we moved out on operations thinking no more of the barrack block.

The South African authorities were bringing news reporters to Xangongo to show that contrary to claims of atrocity they were in fact giving the local population food and medical treatment. However the sight of the F.A.P.L.A. barracks did not fit this image so they had to delay the reporters while bulldozers bashed down the offending building.

While attacking the town of Chivemba a few days later my vehicle was blown up and I spent the next three months in Military Hospital in Pretoria; during my stay there the pathfinder company was disbanded. I returned to London and the Nationalist struggle, as did a few of my comrades, others stayed in South Africa either as civilians or in the forces.



THE WAY FORWARD!

SPREADING THE WORD

THE COLLAPSE of the Nationalist vote at the 1979 General Election inevitably caused all intelligent Nationalists to consider carefully what had gone wrong, and what had to be done in the future. It was generally agreed that the Establishment had succeeded in driving the NF into a political ghetto, so that the overwhelming majority of the public saw us as, at best, irrelevant. However it was not until 1984, when the last of the failed 1970's leadership that had led us into that ghetto was removed, that the NF started to make a serious attempt to build a solid political base.

So far these attempts could basically be described as representing a change in the quality of our propaganda – that is to say that increasingly sophisticated and advanced political views have been expressed in an increasingly intelligent and attractive way. The result of this change can be seen in the increasing numbers of intelligent committed young people the Party is attracting.

MASSIVE INCREASE

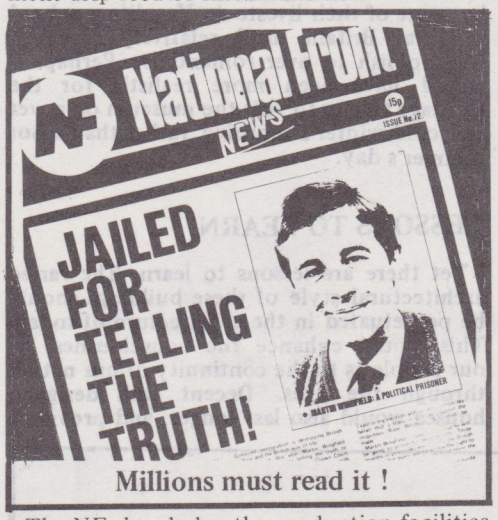
There is however one area in which the NF had advanced little since the 1970's – the quantity of our propaganda output, yet without such an advance the Establishment can still keep us trapped in the ghetto. The improvement in the quality of our publications will be largely irrelevant unless we can massively increase their circulation.

This can best be illustrated by examining NF News, the Party's biggest selling publication. At present fewer than one adult in 2000 reads it. This is in fact a more respectable figure than it sounds – not that many more read Conservative Newsline. The difference is of course that the Tories can rely on the mass media to propagate their views; we cannot. In my view the biggest single reason that we are still largely in a political ghetto and have little real political power is that we have never had the facility of mass communication. Consequently what we say is heard only by tens of thousands, not tens of millions, and media smears however absurd are believed because the vast majority of the population don't hear our side of the story.

The aims of the NF's propaganda are twofold: firstly recruiting the revolutionary elite who will form the basis of a future powerful Nationalist movement, but also we must change the attitude of the vast majority of the British public to Nationalism and the NF. In order to do this we need the facility of mass communication – our propaganda output has to be massive in quantity as well as excellent in quality.

GIVEAWAY

One answer to this problem is that the NF should, in my view, aim to turn National Front News into a free giveaway newspaper with an initial circulation of at least 100,000 copies a month, as a first step in our programme of communicating directly with the public. I feel it is essential that NF News is transformed into a "freebie" if the Party is to escape the ghetto. When you sell a paper you are usually preaching to those who are sufficiently converted to walk up to a street-seller and part with 15 pence. Giving the paper away means that it will get read by those who would otherwise be hostile or apathetic to us, if left on the Establishment drip-feed of smears and lies.



Millions must read it !

The NF already has the production facilities to produce this quantity; distribution could be achieved by branches putting copies through the letter boxes in their target wards, or by handing them out in shopping centres, at football matches etc (imagine the expression on the face of an SWP wimp struggling to sell 2 copies of his rag as the local NF hands out several hundred copies of the hated NF News in front of his eyes.) Copies could be left in libraries, clubs, pubs, anywhere in fact.

If successful I would hope that the number of giveaways could be greatly increased but even at this comparatively modest level the political advantages would be great – a substantial proportion of those sections of the public most likely to be sympathetic to Nationalism will regularly be hearing the NF case. The Establishment will no longer have a complete monopoly over the news and views that people hear.

OBVIOUS PROBLEM

There is however an obvious problem – Money! I would estimate that it would cost approximately £4,000 an issue to produce 100,000 copies, ie. about 4p each. This is obviously going to be difficult, but not in my view impossible. Suppose for example Branches are charged 1.5p per copy. A large Branch distributing 5,000 copies a month will have to raise £75 each time. This could easily be raised by means of regular jumble sales, socials, Branch collections etc. Surely this is not too much to ask of a branch if it is seriously interested in advancing Nationalism in its area!

Each issue produced would of course contain a large appeal for funds. Readers would be asked to send a fiver to the NF News Fighting Fund. Even if only one reader in 500 responded that would still raise £1,000 an issue.

The financial advantages of having adverts for Nationalist books, periodicals, records, etc. read by 100,000 people are difficult to calculate but must be great.

Obviously the financing of this project will have to be studied in great detail, but my personal opinion is that it would be possible but only if the party – every branch and every member – threw itself wholeheartedly behind the scheme. The party in effect would become organised around the paper. If we gave anything less than total commitment to the project it would, I fear, fail.

POLITICAL MUSCLE

At risk of sounding as though I'm living in fantasy world I would also suggest that the NF sets itself a 5 year target of distributing a million newspapers a fortnight. The political advantages of such an activity would be obvious – we would have genuine political muscle for the first time ever. The Establishment would no longer be able to isolate us from the public, and would find that, for the first time ever, Nationalism could answer back!

For this to be achieved the NF's central leadership must ensure the development of 'front' businesses whose profits can subsidise the massive free distribution of political material. But there is also a vital task that each and every member must play his or her part in – the relentless development of a Branch and Regional organisation that is physically capable of distributing such a massive volume of literature.

In conclusion: a prerequisite before Nationalism can have political muscle is that Nationalism had a loud and clear voice. Somehow we must develop methods of communicating directly to more people than we have ever dreamt of in the past; we can no longer afford the luxury of sitting back and waiting for the public to "wake up" and come to us. This article has aimed to show one method that could, in my opinion, work, and I would be obliged if people, especially Branch officials, would write to me (c/o. P.O.Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk, NR3 2AH) giving their views on this essay, and any ideas they may have.

A MEMORIAL TO THE UNSUNG HERO

HERITAGE is a regular series in NT which examines Britain's cultural background. This article is by Eddie Butler, of the NF Heritage Group.

THE NATIONAL FRONT'S Heritage Group recently visited the Weald and Downland Open Air Museum in Sussex. This is one of the most significant museums in the country, and a "must" for any nationalist to visit. This museum is essentially about that unsung hero, the ordinary British working man. The museum consists of a number of buildings of historic value from the south east, saved from destruction and re-built on-site. The 40 acres of museum land fits perfectly into its surroundings. It is set amidst the beautiful lush rolling countryside of the South Downs, truely a green and pleasant land.

It is wrong to get the impression that the museum is only wattle and daub or bricks and mortar. Many traditional crafts are preserved and performed here. It is a depository for the rich culture of yesteryear. The houses are all rebuilt as they were originally constructed, with great craftsmanship. There is an early 19th century saw-pit shed for cutting planks, a pug-mill from a traditional brickyard, and a carpenters shed fully equipped with the tools of that trade. Also there is a large timber barn from around the year 1700, which houses a display of leadworking, a village smithy, and a reconstruction of a charcoal burners camp, as used in ironworking.

The museum is also run as a small scale farm. Rare breeds of cattle and sheep are kept, as are guinea fowl. The crops are harvested using shire horses. Of particular interest with an implending energy crisis is a working watermill which produces stone ground flour from-locally grown corn.. It shows tht once at least our people understood nature and how to respect the soil on which they lived. In the age of factory farms and agri-business this is like a breath of fresh air. The houses themselves are a pleasure to behold, and are in drastic contrast to todays' "architecture". There are none of the grand residences of the Lords spiritual or temporal here, just the homes of everyday folk.

Of course actually living in these dwellings would be very uncomfortable compared to today's standards. The floors are of well-trodden earth. The rooms are usually dark and smoke filled from the open fires needed for warmth. Most of the cottages consist of just one room. Here all the family would live, eat and sleep, probably accompanied by some of their livestock. Yes, life was hard in rural Britain until relatively recently. It is foolish to over romanticise. Perhaps it would have been more realistic for the Heritage Group to visit the museum on a wet and cold winter's morning, rather than a hot summer's day.

LESSONS TO LEARN

Yet there are lessons to learn. The varied architectural style of these buildings should be perpetuated in the architecture of today. This would enhance the consciousness of our people as to the continuity of our nation through the ages. Decent well designed houses would also last longer, and provide a preferential environment to grow up in.

There are perhaps two ways that a nation can become debased and so ripe for extinction. It can lose touch with the natural realities of existance. With most of our people living in sterile cities, appreciation for the fine balances of nature is lacking. The other way is for a nation to forget what it is and how it came into being. Everyone belongs to the past and to the future. Britain today lives for today. If there is no thought for tomorrow then there will not be many more tomorrows.

The Weald and Downland Open Air Museum is one of the few places which encourages respect for the soil and for our culture. It shows that the south east, now a cultural desert, once had a vibrant culture. For this reason it must be supported, and we can hope that it will inspire future visitors. Just as importantly, while the museum flourishes we can be sure that valuable remenants of our past culture will be in safe hands.

The 'Big Apple' Crumbles

THIS was one of the last articles to be written by Joe Pearce, before being incarcerated for twelve months under the Race Act. In it he analyses life in the materialist society that is New York.

NEW YORK, the heart of America and capital of the Yank-controlled world, is dying. This was the conclusion of Roger Starr, a member of the New York Times editorial board, in his recent book The Rise And Fall Of New York City.

In his book the rapid decline of New York is well documented by Mr Starr who has witnessed the city's decay at close quarters. For instance, he recalls two power failures in the city, one in 1965 and the other in 1977. Subway trains were left between stations, lifts between floors, and streets unlit. In 1965 nothing much happened except that nine months later more babies than usual were born. Twelve years later, in 1977, looters sacked stores, and there were 4,500 arrests. The difference in public behaviour was, says Mr Starr, cataclysmic.

Since 1977 the decline has continued apace. Life in 1985, New York style, is like a never ending catalogue of horrors:

HORRORS

Two boys, to get their revenge on a subway clerk who had stopped them jumping turnstiles, returned with petrol and burned the woman to death: this is a practice known as torching.

A 14 year-old boy was shot to death for his bicycle and his sister asked: "Couldn't they just have shot him in the leg?" This case, in particular, gets the essence of the whole criminal city – that violence is expected and accepted. "But couldn't they just have shot him in the leg?"

Any collection of horrors may seem somewhat sensationalist. But here are the words of Robert J. Maguire, former police commissioner of New York:

"It has become a fact that older people in the city are afraid of kids. The statistics are three, four, five times what they were 20 years ago, and the pathology is much worse. The kids who prey on people have a look in their eye that says 'Your life isn't worth anything to me'. Random, gratuitous. Like pulling wings off butterflies, only the butterflies are people."

Besides the problem of violence, there is the drug problem which has reached epidemic proportions in New York on a scale scarcely imaginable in Britain. Furthermore, of the thousands of drug pushers which plague New York, very few are White. This is a fact which even the most liberal-minded would not seek to deny. It is merely a matter of observation, in the courts and in the newspapers, that in a city which is 60% White, most of the criminals are Black or Hispanic.

Even the Jewish mayor of New York, Mayor Koch, was forced to admit the high incidence of non-White crime: "It's true. I think the figures are about 80% of all crimes in the city are committed by Blacks or Hispanics . . Of course there'll be beatings and assaulting and robbing of Whites, there's no question of it. Why do criminals go to the almost entirely White upper East Side? Because that's where the money is."

WHITE FLIGHT

The fact is that White people, and particularly older White people, are afraid of young Blacks and Hispanics. Mayor Koch talks about White Flight, the process whereby Whites who can't insulate themselves simply leave the city altogether instead. Mayor Koch is not a racist, he is a lifelong liberal who is extremely antagonist to the very concept of racialism. Yet he says he has been mugged out of his liberalism by the realities of life in New York. There is no room for liberal fantasising about a multi-racial utopia in New York these days!

Filthy, squalid and degrading – the streets of New York show the city's decline.

New York's decline is being accelerated by the enormous influx of Hispanics from Puerto Rico, and Mexico, and by the determination of these immigrants to maintain their separate identity and separate language. Many Hispanics in New York (and in other cities like Miami, Houston, and Los Angeles), having a legal right to be taught at school in their own language, do not speak enough English to hold down a decent job. They then, naturally, resent the consequences of this incapacity. So much for the American melting pot.

And what of the city's schools. In 1984, 5,200 assaults, robberies, and drug and sex offences were reported to the school authorities. In the first four months of the present school year, 621 weapons were confiscated from students. More than 36% of high school pupils were two years behind in reading and more than 40% in maths. On any given day, 20% of the city's high school pupils were absent. Forty per cent of all children, and more than seventy per cent of Blacks and Hispanics, do not complete their high school education.

The result of this is that no-one who can afford to do other-wise ever sends his children to the city's schools. Thus the class and race separation of New York becomes ever more marked.

After monitoring the decline of New York, one cant help but being reminded of Oswald Spengler's cyclical view of world history as set forth in his Decline Of The West. In previous civilisations, towns have grown from bartering places, to great cities, to world cities, which, in their doomed way, moved on to final self-destruction.

Perhaps Spengler is about to be proved right with regard to New York. Perhaps that cancerous growth on the eastern coast of the United States which has been responsible for infecting the rest of the world with its Dollar Disease is about to self-destruct. If it does there will be few tears shed by Racial Nationalists either in Britain or the rest of the world.

Nevertheless, there are lessons to be drawn from New York's decline which are best not ignored.

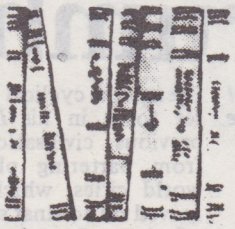
SOULLESS

Firstly, New York is a soulless society where people don't matter. Human value has been relegated to a position of relative insignificance when compared to the far greater value put upon money and material possessions. Thus it is that New York kids "have a look in their eye that says 'Your life isn't worth anything to me. Random, gratuitous. Like pulling wings off butterflies, only the butterflies are people." Quite simply, people mean nothing in a society where materialistic money worship is the only morality.

Secondly, New York is a rootless, cosmopolitan and multi-racial society where people live an alienated existence in alien surroundings, devoid of any feeling of belonging in either a habitational or historical sense. Thus it is that Puerto Ricans and Mexicans cling to the culture and language of their homelands, realising that the American way of life has nothing whatsoever to offer them.

New York is often called the Big Apple, yet it is a rotten apple worm-eaten with multi-racial materialism. That, of itself, should not concern us. However, what should concern us is the realisation that the cities of Europe will share New York's fate unless the people of Europe cure themselves of the malady of multi-racial materialism.

BOOK SHELF



"I BELIEVED"

WRITTEN BY DOUGLAS HYDE. REVIEWED BY MARK ALDER

Although written almost forty years ago I Believed continues to be of value and interest to Nationalists. Although it is currently out of print Nationalist Books have acquired a number of second-hand copies. All are in good condition, and are available for £2.50 including postage, from Nationalist Books, 50 Pawsons Road, Croydon, Surrey CRO 2QF.

JUST LIKE soldiers at war, fierce political opponents become inquisitive about how their enemy thinks and how he behaves amongst his political comrades. I Believed provides a rare if somewhat dated insight into the personality and decision making process of the British Communist Party in the nineteen-thirties and forties by a former high ranking member of the party.

Although the personalities of British Communism have changed and the number of feuding Marxist groups has increased, it is still possible to find certain constant characteristics that link the marxists of 1985 with the Hyde's communist party. Moreover, much of the continuing influence communists retain in certain British institutions is due to the 'trial blazing' work of the earlier British communists.

CONTEMPTUOUS

These days our experience of communists leaves us contemptuous of them because of their fear of allowing us to participate in general political debate and their reliance on violent intimidation to defeat the logic of our case. Yet when you consider the lack of popular support for marxism, the disproportionate influence they wield in certain unions, town halls and pressure groups is testimony to the power of communism to draw men and women who will work seven days a week for what is to them a faith. Despite his alienation from a creed he once worshipped Hyde retained a respect for the idealism that motivated so many communists. He argues that people are drawn to communism in their search for spiritual inspiration when there is no alternative philosophy in a cynical world.

Thoughout history there has been mass poverty and social injustice but it is this century which has seen the results of the erosion of religious faith. People have demanded a prescription for problems and communism has been proffered as a pseudo-religion. Hyde says "communism is the child of unbelief". Certainly he was drawn to an atheistic communism's supposed interest in injustice after finding that his fellow Methodists had no intention of addressing Britain's social problems. "Communism I believe had its origins in precisely that spiritual vacuum which exists all over what was once Christendom".

Hyde argues that to see the mass of communists as simply intent on wielding power for their personal grandisement is to build anti-communism on false premises and thus weaken the potential to oppose marxism. In fact Hyde illustrates that the success of communist campaigns and recruitment in the thirties and the War was very much the result of the sacrifice of its members, "Communist atheists often put to shame by their energy and devotion to those who possess a faith which has the only real and lasting answers to our problems". There is the example of 'Jimmie' who had lost a leg in an accident and who was responsible for delivering copies of the Communist Daily Worker newspaper to readers in his area. When German bombing of London made it seemingly impossible to deliver Jimmie's daily supply of papers he rode a bike which one pedal removed right throughthe Blitz each night to collect his supplies Of course nationalism has inspired equal fanaticism and sacrifice but such stories represent a continuing challenge to our own members commitment at a time when the Establishment has become adept at buying off or intimidating its political opponents.

Hyde came to realise that just because communism identified the existance of social injustice this did not mean that communism was any less evil itself. For communists "there are no spiritual values, no moral or ethical considerations". The single minded concern, the achievement of victory whatever the means necessary leads to opportunism and hypocracy and a leadership made up of those most adept at duplicity and free of concern for the suffering of individuals or nations. In his position as Daily Worker editor and a member of the Party's ruling Political Bureau Hyde had a relatively unique view of the leaders of the party. In what represents a clearly objective analysis Hyde's recollections of the communist leaders portrayed them as cynical, amoral and generally unpalitable characters. Douglas Hyde remembers how after a Kent school was bombed, Party General Secretary Harry Pollit would refer to their deaths in his speeches using the image of the children's "little velvet bodies". Hardened communists were soon larughing at the prospect of having to listen to Pollit cynically using the image of the little velvet bodies to stir up audience after audience. Of Party Vice-Chairman R Palme Dutt Hyde says "to him Marxism was a science, human sympathy and idealism appeared not to enter into his make-up at all."

EXPLOITED

It was these men who determined policies which cynically exploited the idealism of others and often ran counter to earlier communism pronouncements or the stated aims of the Party. During the Spanish Civil War for instance, the British Communist Party found it was losing too many valuable activists in the conflict. However, in order to maintain the image of British Communists going off bravely to fight in Spain 'the party of the working class' replaced its activists by shanghaing drunken tramps from the Embankment in London and transporting them as unconscious recruits to the International Brigade in Spain!

In the case of Douglas Hyde British Communist plans to disrupt the country's post-war recovery on the orders of Moscow disgusted him. Recruits to communism like anyone else vary in their willingness to be corrupted and Hyde points out how many idealistic communists discovered that marxism contradicted their instincts. The Party encouraged sexual promiscuity between members but Hyde recollects how one member was visibly sickened by a colleagues boast of sexual conquests of female members because one of the women was his fiancee. Many women in fact become hostile to communism because "there is a great deal in communism which clashes with human nature and no-one becomes more quickly aware of this than the ordinary working class housewife".

NEW IDEAS

Fortunately for Hyde his growing disquiet with Communism coincides with his discovery of new ideas and a new faith. He reveals how a female communist agreed that she too no longer believed in marxism and the Party but could not bear to leave because she had no-one else to put her faith and life in. Hyde, in his search for links between Fascism and the Catholic Church, had read a publication The Weekly Review whose contributor shared his interest in the Pre-Reformation period. "It was disquieting to discover that people occupying the exact opposite of my own ideological position could none the less have similar cultural interests and . . . perhaps even similar dreams as well". It is an observation which our Party in its desire to build links with other groups and individuals has only just begun to test.

Hyde was even more startled by the simple logic of Distributism as the real alternative to Capitalism, not the communist demand for mass nationalisation. "Now suddenly the slipshod character of such pre-fabricated thoughts struck me between the eyes . . . the formulation should have been the unequal distribution of property gives rise to great social injustice, therefore property should be more equatably distributed." That an intelligent man like Hyde should never have considered this earlier indicates why the heresy of marxism has been so successful. Hyde's immediate recognition of the superiority of Distributism when confronted with it is apt testimony to its attractiveness as an idea.

Douglas Hyde's resignation from the Communist Party damaged the false image of respectibility the party had sought to build. The publication of I Believed has left us with a testimony to the evil of communism and its power to attract and corrupt those seeking a better world. Now it is up to us to provide an alternative creed.

THE STRUCTURE OF FOLK GOVERNMENT

HOW SHOULD Britain be governed? Can Parliamentry Democracy really represent the will of the Nation? What should the structure of Government be?

Questions like these have rarely been given the attention they deserve by Nationalists. In order to stimulate debate Nationalism Today is starting an occasional series called 'Running Britain' in which a variety of authors will give their views on Constitutional topics.

These articles are for the purposes of stimulating debate: they are the personal opinions of their authors only, and should not be taken to represent the opinions of Nationalism Today or the National Front.

The first article was written by YNF Organiser Michael Fishwick.

OVER the last few years the concept of Revolutionary Nationalism has greatly developed. The broad outlines of our creed have been carefully woven together to form a comprehensible and concise statement of our beliefs, yet there is still much theoretical planning and debate to be undertaken in certain areas of our ideology. One such area where much thought and debate must come into being is that of government. When the National Revolution has been won and held onto, what form of government will be implemented? How can we be sure of providing justice and opportunity for all our folk? It's all very well stating that we believe in decentralisation and individual's controlling and determining their own lives as much as possible, but precisely how will this be done? I do not claim to know the answers to these questions but I hope that these few thoughts will stimulate others to try and tackle this manifest task.

It must be stated from the very beginning that the British family of Nations – England, Scotland, Wales, Ulster, Ireland and the various islands will remain as an organic whole until the end of time. It can be no other way. We are and have been inextricably linked since the beginning of time – racially, culturally, historically, and geographically – and we will remain so eternally. We are spiritually linked forever in blood and soil.

STRUCTURE OF GOVERNMENT

The first question to be considered is that of National government, the government of the British family of Nations. Present day government has three main characteristics. These are:

1) It almost totally controls and regulates peoples lives.
2) It has complete control over defence.
3) It has complete control over the police. (a pseudo security force).

For reasons of space I shall consider only the first premise, but first we must examine National government itself. Although we believe in decentralisation we also recognise the need of National government, but National (British) government must concern itself only with matters of National concern, or for want of a better phrase external factors. Internal government, that which affects the daily lives of our folk, must be kept entirely seperate. Internal government must be organised into a tier structure, giving our folk as much real freedom and control over their destinies as possible. For this I envisage a five tier structure of government to cover our folknation. At first sight this may seem like needless bureaucracy until it is realised that each tier is necessary to give the individual as much freedom as possible.

FIVE TIERS

This tier structure would be as follows:

National government for England, Scotland, Wales, Ulster and Ireland when she eventually rejoins our family, from her own free will.

Regional government for the British regions, as opposed to the British Nations, which would form national governments, from which elected representatives would form British government. The regions will be based on historical, geographical, cultural and linguistic lines.

There is more to Democracy than putting crosses on a ballot-slip: if the structure of government is wrong then that government can never represent the nation.

Area government would be formed on the lines of the present County Councils. These would cover the traditional counties of the British Isles.

Local Government would be formed on the lines of the present Parliamentry constituences.

Community government would be formed to cover existing council wards and parish councils.

Each of the spheres that these governing bodies would cover must be as self-sufficient as possible. Obviously it is impossible for any of them to become totally self-providing, that is where the next governing tier would come into operation.

Now that the structure of government has been briefly covered we must come to consider the question of democracy, the question of the individual. The word democracy is much bandied about and misused. It means all things to all people. Everyone knows that present day 'democracy' is a dishonest sham. Proportional representation would be more democratic, but is it fair that everyone, however much, or little, they contribute to the welfare of our folk and our nation, should have exactly the same power to determine the future of our folknation? This writer does not think so.

FAIR SYSTEM

Surely it would be much more fair to have a system whereby those who contribute to our folknation have power that is proportional to the extent of their contribution. In the case of the individual, power means the ability to vote. Of course everyone must be able to vote, but the individual must be able to determine his or her own voting power. For instance, if they participate in recreational activities that enhance the moral, spiritual or physical health of our nation they must have, say, three votes. These activities would include such things as sport, conservation, militia and cultural and historical preservation. Individuals who organise or help to organise such activities for others should, I feel, receive say five votes.

In present day society the vast majority of people vote on the strength of one or two highlighted policies that they agree with, or they vote by tradition. The vast majority of people do not vote for what they want. This was recently proved in a poll by the left wing New Statesman who, to their amazement and horror, found out that if the vast majority of British people wanted to see their views and beliefs put into action, they would have to vote for the National Front, the only party that advocated most of those beliefs.

This writer believes that it is not only desirable but morally right for people who stand in elections, to stand as individuals, not as representatives of various political organisations. Election candidates must stand on their own beliefs, not on other people's doctrines, and they must be of three vote status to qualify as a candidate. The elected candidate would work and be paid as a full time representative of the people. He must have no other income. This would eliminate the vote of ignorence or tradition and the election of crooks and opportunists. People would vote for people not parties. This is not to say that there is no need for political parties. There will always be a need for people to gather in groups to expound and develop ideas, but political parties would be transformed solely into schools of thought.

Now we must consider the election of the various governing tiers. This can be most easily explained by starting with the smallest organic unit, the individual. The individual would vote for the next strata of the organic whole – community government. The next tier of government, local government, would be made up of representatives of community government. These representatives would advise and argue in the local government on behalf of their communities and would be directed in this by the community government, who in turn would be directed by the individual. And so the process develops. Local government representatives form area government and so on until finally a British government is formed from elected representatives of the various National governments of the British family of Nations. The election of representatives onto a higher governmental tier by the representatives of a lower strata of government would be conducted on a one person, one vote system.

With these few thoughts and others that shall follow from comrades, the people's state shall be born.

Mind Control – American Style

TELEVISION HAS always been one of the most important weapons in the campaign to force milti-racialism down the throats of the peoples of the Western world. Not a day goes past without yet another film about a brilliant African brain surgeon saving the life of an ignorant racist bigot, or a heroic half-caste cop fighting crime and racial prejudice.

It is clear to Nationalists that the barrage of propaganda is so continuous that it can only be part of a deliberate brain-washing policy. But try to explain this to ordinary members of the public and they often won't believe it.

Yet evidence has now been released of the calculated and cynical use of television to manipulate the opinions and behaviour of White people in favour of race-mixing. This experiment was carried out back in 1979, but the results have only just been released because the man responsible – Milton Rokeach, a member of the sociology department at Washington State University – thought they should be kept secret.

Rokeach, his wife Sandra and another Jewish social psychologist, Joel Grube, wrote the script for a 30 minute T.V. programme "The Great American Values Test". Three top stations, ABC, CBS and NBC, under the guidance of their Jewish owners and overwhelmingly Jewish staff, provided the half hour of prime early evening viewing time free of charge.

"VALUES CONFRONTATION"

The experiment was a test of a technique for changing the way people behave, called "values confrontation". Viewers were given a statement about their personal values with which they were likely to agree. Then they were led by a biased commentary to the conclusion that some belief of behaviour pattern the experimentors wanted to change was contrary to those personal values.

The aim, according to Rokeach, is to make the viewer feel guilty, and they to give him a way to free himself of his guilt by changing his attitudes and behaviour.

At one stage in the programme, Jewish actor Ed Asner told viewers that Americans rank freedom much higher in their scale of personal values than equality. He went on to explain that people who rank equality very high were upset when Martin Luther King was shot. Those who ranked equality low tended to feel that "he brought it on himself".

"What we're trying to do is give people factural information that triggers within them a sense of self-dissatisfaction", Rokeach explained. "They can get rid of the dissatisfaction by increasing the importance that they place on equality in their everyday lives."

To test how successful the technique was, the experimenters sent out questionaires to TV viewers in the reception area both before and several weeks after the programme, and to a similar group of people outside the reception area. The questionaire made no mention of the programme, but asked people to rank their personal values and to agree or disagree with racialist comments. On the night of the broadcast, 1,700 homes on the mailing list were telephoned and asked whether they had watched the programme, and if so what they thought of it.

AMAZING DIFFERENCE

By combining the results of the surveys, it was possible to see how much effect the programme had on peoples' attitudes. Said Rokeach: "The difference between viewers and non-viewers was enormous – amazing, really."

To see how much effect it all had on peoples' behaviour, the mailing list was then given to several fund-raising organisations, including ones promoting Black causes. The appeals didn't mention the programme, but it was found that people who had watched it without interruption gave much more money (300-400% more depending on the organisation) than those who did not.

Rokeach and Co. were amazed by the "almost unbelievable" capacity of TV to manipulate people's ideas and behaviour, but they concluded that there was little danger that the technique would be misused by politicians or others. When you remember who owns and controls the television network, that, from the point of view of Rokeach, Grube and Asner, seems reasonable enough. People of other races, who oppose the drive towards race-mixing, will no doubt see things rather differently.

THE HONEST ISRAELI

DAVE STEVENS

RABBI Meir Kahane is the leader of the 'Kach' movement which is the fastest growing political force in Israel. A year ago Brooklyn-born Kahane was in the political wilderness, but since the election, which gave him a seat in the Knesset he has been going from strength to strength. Several times a night Kahane speaks in the working class towns and slym neighbourhoods that make up the backbone of his support.

He is growing as Arab-Jewish violence is on the increase, as Israel with its 2009% yearly inflation rate, goes from economic crisis to another.

For the 'Kach' things are looking good, the polls show that they could gain up to eight seats in an election. Kahane is even more optimistic, "I don't believe in those polls, I believe that for each person who is ready to admit openly that he will vote Kach in the next election there is yet another one who will vote Kach and hasn't the courage to admit it yet". Israel has proportional representation. If Kahane is right, and he could be, that could make the 'Kach' the third largest party in the Knesset.

According to one survey, it is the youth that Kahane appeals to. Over 40% of Israeli youth support him. This is even higher amongst religious youth.

What exactly does Kahane and the 'Kach' movement represent? It's simple; he is a racist. He recognises that if Israel is anything, it is a racist state. He calls for the expulsion by force of all Arabs in Israel, and of the Palestinians in the occupied territories.

His propaganda blames the Arabs for drugs and prostitution, that the Arabs take the jobs, and all Arabs are potential terrorists. Within 2 hours of a bomb explosion Kach's well-oiled machine has leafletters out on the streets.

TOO HONEST

The liberals and the Israeli apologists hate Kahane because he is too honest, because he takes Judaism, and the inate logic of the state of Israel to its logical conclusion:– Israel is either Jewish and Zionist, or it is Palestinian and Arab.

But the best way to understand this is in the words of Kahane himself.

"If they (the Arabs) are not out, then we're going to be out. I have no intention of losing my state to bullets or babies. The problem is that Zionist is in total contradiction with Western democracy as we know it, and in Judaism, NO NON–JEW HAS A RIGHT TO BE A CITIZEN OF A JEWISH STATE. Now if you're not happy with that it's fine. I have no quarrel with people who are unhappy with that, but they should know that it's no Kahane. IT'S JUDAISM. I respect the Arabs because I know that you cannot buy them. There is a British Imperialist attitude here, a Rudyard Kipling kind of thing whereby they say 'what do the Arabs want? We came here and found a desert and turned it into a garden'. That's what all the United Jewish Appeal speakers tell their tourists. Well what does the Arab say to that? 'It was our desert and now it's your garden'. These imbeciles here boast about how we took an Arab village that had no water and now they have indoor toilets – if you think you can buy a person's national pride with an indoor toilet, you are in desperately bad shape. Nor when they boast about how they were illiterate and now they're studying Hebrew – well, I put it to you that the most dangerous Arab in Israel is precisely the student of Hebrew, because the revolution doesn't come from the numb and the dumb. It comes from the intellectual, and the intellectual Arab knows that he isnot a first class citizen under the hypocracy of Zionism as it's known now. If anything, most Arabs will tell you, if they're honest, at least Kahane is honest".

The pretence of Israel as a nation of tolerance is wearing more than a little thin. Men like Kahane who dare to take the ideology of Judaism and Zionism to its logical conclusion, are helping strip the bandit state of its last remnants of respectability.

ASSASSINS

It is quite possible that Kahane could find himself on the wrong end of a an assassins bullet. The chances are that it would more than likely come from a faction of the ruling Israeli establishment, embarassed by his words and threatened by his success, than from one of his Arab opponents.

And maybe it's time some of the Arab opposition stopped talking about a secular Arab state that could be home to Jew and Arab alike, as a sop to the liberals so as not to be seen as anti-semetic. The land of Palestine either belongs to the Palestinians and the faith that they subscribe to, or it belongs to the Jews and their faith.

The state of Israel and its unique 'nationalism' that relies on 'internationalism' for its survival, that relies on a fifth column, on a dual loyalty wherever its people go, is getting more open and more hysterical as it sees some of theimage it likes to promote of its self crack. Not even the newspeak of the Zionists and the plutocrats can paper over the cracks. When 16 year-old girls go on suicide missions because 'god is great' and are prepared to 'Die so that our nation can live', then the rhetoric of "cowardly terrorists" wears a little thin.

So we must expect more 'holocaust pt50' and more 'Anne Franks Diary' on our screens and in the papers, as their lie machine goes into overdrive. We must expect more aplogists to step into the linelight as their position is seen as threat-bare. And we should hope that Rabbi Kahane continues to rise in the Israeli polls and that the Kach win seat after seat, not just because he is an easy target for us to aim at, not just because he is an acute embarassment to the Israeli establishment and their side-kicks in the western world. But because after decades of the most two-faced, slimy and corrupt opponents in the battle against international Zionism, in Rabbi Kahane we have an enemy, but an enemy that we can respect.

NWA: DEFEND THOSE WHO DEFEND YOU

ANOTHER Christmas and New Year has come and gone. During that time, most of us took the opportunity to put up our feet and enjoy the festivities.

However, that was not true of all of us. For during that period, Martin Wingfield, former editor of National Front News, spent his time behind bars. For daring to speak up for Britain and the British people, Martin was jailed for three months. Martin Wingfield was a political prisoner – a prisoner of the Race Board!

Then, NF Chairman Ian Anderson and NF Education and Training Dept. Chairman Joe Pearce, were in court. They were both up on a Race Act charge, a result of which was the imprisonment of Joe for twelve months. Ian was found 'Not Guilty'.

Many other NF members are already behind bars. Others face jail sentances, or heavy fines. All have been charged because they dare to stand up for our Race and Nation.

All NF members and supporters should support our Comrades who face the courts. You can do that by supporting the Nationalist Welfare Association – the NWA.

There are four main ways in which you can help the NWA. They are:

* Send in a personal donation to the NWA.
* Get your NF unit to send in a donation to the NWA.
* Buy a special 'Great Britain' NWA T–shirt, to help us raise funds.
* Send in the Name/Prison Address of NF members/supporters who are serving time, because they stood up for Britain.

And remember, you never know when you'll need the help of the Nationalist Welfare Association – so please donate today! Please send all donations – large or small – to John Field (Treasurer), P.O. Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk, NR3 2AH.

Greetings to the NF

THE WHITE INTERNATIONAL

The following are a selection of the Messages of Fraternal Greetings that were read out at the 1985 Annual General Meeting of the National Front held in London on November 23rd. This selection compiled by National Directorate member Derek Holland, shows that the credibility of the NF with other patriotic groups has risen dramatically since we adopted a platform of Revolutionary Nationalism.

SWEDEN

"For the last ten years the National Front has contributed strongly to the inspiration of Swedish nationalists and to our struggle against Marxism and Capitalism; as well as to our fight for a pure national community. Thus we send you our thanks and our congratulations for your work in Britain. We are also grateful for the short, though interesting, visit of Joe Pearce earlier this year. We hope that the important work of maintaining contact will continue and expand.

Best wishes and good luck!"

Fredrik Lundin.

pp. Bevara Sverige Svenskt.

U.S.A.

"America's National Democratic Front salutes the National Front on the occasion of its 1985 Annual General Meeting. The National Front is now the model for National Revolutionary Movements around the world, and we especially are indebted to the NF for what it has taught us and for the friendship that it has shown us. Our comradeship and co-operation will strengthen us in the struggle against our common enemies, who will one day lie prostrate before us on both sides of the Atlantic".

The Directorate of the N.D.F.

GERMANY

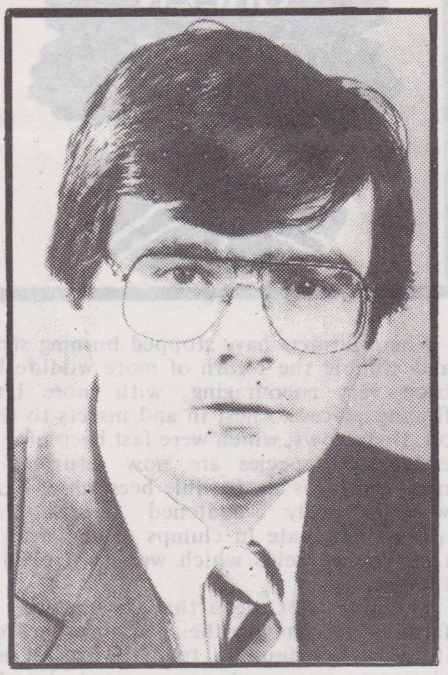
"On behalf of the Nationaldemokratische Partei Deutschlands (NPD), I greet this year's Annual General Meeting of the National Front.

Although there are no official relations between our two parties the NPD is watching the rapid ideological and political progress of the NF with great and friendly interest. As you know the United Kingdom is one of the main victims of the internationalist capitalist, materialist and bureaucratic establishment. But it is not only your country that is suffering from the imperialist evil. It is Europe that suffers. Not only Germany but Europe as a whole has lost the Second World War. That is why we appreciate very much your support for the reunification of Germany. A reunited Germany would also mean a reunited Europe. We have to realise that the European peoples have many things in common, although we must not negate the differences. Our common cultural heritage, nearly two thousand years of Christianity, the origin of our peoples – all these facts show that we have the same roots. That is why the European peoples and especially the European nationalists have to work together to fight the imperialist powers and the Afro-Asiatic invasion of the Old Continent. Let me sum up in two slogans: NO MORE BROTHERS' WARS! EUROPE FOR EUROPEANS!

Wolfgang Bendel.

NPD Foreign Department.

ULSTER



George Seawright

"Greetings to the 1985 Annual General Meeting of the National Front. I regret that I will be unable to attend your AGM owing to another engagement today. Many thanks for your work in support of Ulster's freedom struggle over the past 16 years. I hope to be able to attend one of your activities in the near future.

With every good wish for the future.

George Seawright.

Northern Ireland Assemblyman.

ITALY

"On behalf of the Italian nationalist publishing house, Edizioni di Ar, I send national revolutionary greetings to the comrades of the British National Front. We wish to let British comrades know that, despite the intense efforts of the Zionist media, Italian nationalists do not, and did not, believe the lies propagated about your Movement in regard to the football massacre in Belgium earlier this year. Not only do we not hate the British people for this alleged political atrocity, we can say positively that we will work harder in 1986 to build a far more constructive relationship between British and Italian patriots; that we will lay a foundation stone in the creation of a Europe of the Peoples. The political repression that has occurred in Italy has taken its toll – in the hour of our darkness the light of your revolutionary struggle provides us with hope and consolation".

Giorgio Franco Freda.

Publisher and Nationalist Prisoner of War.

RUMANIA

"It is a distinct privilege and honour for me to send fraternal greetings from Rumanian legionaries in exile upon this occasion of the 18th National Front Annual General Meeting. We have been fighting the same ubiquitous enemy of Western Civilization.

Legionaries, inspired by Corneliu Z. Codreanu, hoisted a flag of battle and gave the alarm in Eastern Europe in the wake of the menacing Red Revolution. You, in Britain, have hoisted a flag of battle to redeem your Country from the usurers' claws and restore her to her rightful position among peoples she once held. In this you have our wholehearted support. Forward then united in purpose, discipline and sacrificial dedication to this ideal, for the liberation of your Britain. In this, may God bless you.

Long live Britain for the British!"

Jianu Danieleau.

Exiled Rumanian Iron Guard.

PORTUGAL

"The National Action Movement takes this opportunity, at an important moment in the future of Britain and of Europe, to express its solidarity with the National Front and with the present Annual General Meeting. Throughout Europe, the struggle against Capitalism and Communism grows stronger by the day, and for that reason it is necessary for Nationalists to unite in the war against the political system that rules us.

Comrades for Europe and for National Revolution!"

The Burning Question

THE SMELL of burning is in the air, and large clouds of smoke rise into the autumn sky, and soot is carried for miles on the wind. No, it's not just the riot season, it's also harvest time, so cereal farmers all over the country are out in their fields with a can of petrol in one hand and a box of matches in the other. Of course they also have a friend handy with a bucket of water in case the fire over their many acres gets out of control.

It all started in the early part of the 1960's when new methods of farming were being tried out. The government encouraged the widespread removal of hedges and ditches with grants of up to 60% of the cost of removal. This was backed up with the new farming methods being taught in agricultural colleges and the articles and adverts in the farming magazines, which most modern farmers rely on for advice. The result was the many small fields of one farm became just one massive field in the new agri-business farms.

The Common Agricultural Policy of the EEC and further numerous government policies made matters worse by encouraging more and more traditionally mixed farmers to switch to just cereal farming, because their policies made it more profitable. This suited the needs of the big chemical companies such as ICI who were then able to sell nitrogenous fertilizers to the farmers whose land was not naturally suited to crop growing.

Then as some areas of Britain became almost one huge wheat field the demand for straw, which had been used as winter bedding on the mixed farms for the cattle and sheep, fell dramatically. The cost of baling and transport to other areas of the country where there became greater than the cattle and sheep farms would pay, so the cereal farmers were left with the problem of vast quantities of unwanted straw, an average of 6 million tonnes each year.

The advice the farmers then received was to burn the straw and stubble because this was cheap and easy and had the added bonus of quickly preparing the ground for the sowing of winter wheat. The added bonus for the chemical companies was that burning so damaged the soil the farmer had to use artificial fertilizers in order to continue producing the same yield each year.

Some farmers also realised that they could remove hedges at no cost at all if they simply let the straw burn too close to them, and so with no regard for wildlife and the damage done to plants and flowers the farmers carried on. Despite the mounting public concern the government did very little to discourage the burning and the National Farmers Union actually encouraged it. Then following the many disasters of 1983 when much property was destroyed by fires running out of control and many people died as a result of road accidents caused by smoke covering busy main roads the government attempted to control the burning with a voluntary code of practice, and increased fines for careless burning. This has had little effect though because the courts have not imposed the maximum fines of £2,000,. In one case in Inchture, Perthshire a farmer who allowed his fire to engulf and destroy a two storey cottage was only fined £250.

Some farmers though are beginning to use the more responsible method of trailing chopping disks over the fields after harvest. This leaves a layer of small bits of straw partially pushed into the soil which decomposes quickly and can soon be ploughed in. This ensures that the soil is kept rich in humus and reduces compression by heavy machinery. It has also recently been discovered that decomposing straw absorbs some of the nitrates in the soil so stopping them from polluting our water supplies.

Where farmers have stopped burning straw and stubble the return of more wildlife has been very encouraging, with more birds finding places to nest in and insects to feed on. Hedgerows, which were fast becoming an endangered species are now returning in many areas, as are bumble bees which again were seriously threatened because their queens hibernate in clumps of dry grass on the edge of fields which were destroyed in the burning.

This does not mean that the majority of farmers are changing their methods, far from it, most continue to take the easiest and cheapest way out, encouraged by the capitalist policies of government and the 'advice' of the farming magazines which are controlled by big business. Their predecessors knew to respect nature because they learnt from their fathers and grandfathers, with generations of experience and not from books written by the economists of agri-business.

Traditional methods of farming would be restored under a nationalist government, because only be having a balanced farming programme and a respect for nature will we still be able to continue to grow crops in our presently polluted soil for generations to come.

COMMON THEFT

THE PUBLIC has legal right of access to only one fifth of Britain's 1,200,000 areas of rural commonland – and can be ordered off at the whim of any owner.

– That was the claim made by Duncan Mackay, deputy secretary of the Open Spaces Society. He also pointed out that all commonland belongs to someone from the Crown to insurance companies.

This occurred because the Commons Registration Act, 1965, which arose from a 1958 Royal Commission, was intended simply to record the extent of the land and the common rights over it.

However, the legislation was badly flawed and provided loopholes through which land speculators and developers have been exploiting ever since.

Thus our commons are being stolen from us and lost for ever beneath housing estates pine forests and the plough. Duncan Mackay maintained that although many people have pointed out that the public's interest has been ignored by the land speculators and developers, Parliament has refused to do anything about the situation.

The 1965 Act is now regarded as "a modern land grabbers' charter"

ACID RAIN IS TO BLAME

AT LONG LAST the authorities have decided to do something about acid rain. No, they're not going to take steps to limit the sulphur emissions that cause acid rain in the first place – they're going to conduct a survey.

However, the survey will be of some use, because at least it'll officially record the damage caused by acid rain.

The survey was prompted by a visit to Britain by Professor Bengt Nihlgard, a Swedish expert on the effect of acid rain on trees. During his four days visit, Professor Nihlgard examined beech trees in southern England and Wales.

What he saw was 'alarming'. According to his report, the damage to British deciduous trees was worse than anything he'd seen anywhere else, even in the dying forests of central Europe.

He reported that beech trees "showed all symptoms of damage" almost everywhere he went. "Leaves were yellowing, the branches were shortened in growth".

In addition, Professor Nihlgard said that he could only find one group of trees that were "almost healthy" during his study.

So now the authorities – the the shape of the Forestry Commission – are to examine Britain's beech trees. And we are confident that their findings will confirm what environmentalists and Nationalists alike, have been saying for years: That acid rain is responsible for destroying vast areas of natural beauty, and if nothing is done to halt this process, we may be the last generation to enjoy our rural heritage.

KEIRON RICHARDS

Trouble shooting

12 GOOD MEN AND TRUE

YOU could see his eyes shoot straight up to the ceiling. "Oh no, not another couple of idiots determined to defend themselves, why don't they leave the law to those who know about it. I suppose they'll mess it up, defendants defending themselves always do."

He didn't actually say those words, but you could see them going through the mind of the Hon. Mr. Justice Coombe when he heard the good news. Meanwhile on the other side of the Court the prosecuting barrister, Andrew Collins Q.C. (son of CND sympathiser, the Reverend Canon Collins) smiled smugly – he hardly need be present – the defendants would probably incriminate themselves, especially as one of them, the Chairman of the National Front, was clearly suffering from a hangover.

All Nationalism Today readers are invited to send messages of support to jailed NT writer Joe Pearce. Martin Wingfield received several hundred letters of support whilst he was in prison:– let's make sure that Joe gets THOUSANDS of letters.

Write to Joe at the following address:–

HUT CELLS

CHURCH ROAD
EASTCHURCH
KENT
ME 12 4AA

It'll all be over in two or three days and another fat fee in the bank, not to mention the prestige of having put two racialists in jail:– he should get at least the chairmanship of the committee of inquiry into the next race riot.

Two members of the jury, who looked decidedly hostile, were rejected by the defendants. Only when one of the remaining members of the jury, who had a decidedly Anglo-Saxon name, picked up the Old Testament to swear in was it realised that as a Jewess she was named as a member of that group of people against whom Bulldog was meant to incite racial hatred. Funny how Jews suddenly become a 'racial' group when it suits them.

The final jury, with the Jewess gone, looked like a good cross-section of the British people, which as we were to find out later means that if East Enders, Dallas and Dynasty all tell them that racialism is evil, then they believe it.

After an interminably boring introduction by the scarcely awake prosecution barrister we came to the twenty-one police witnesses. The first few all explained why wedding photographs of Joe and his wife were vital clues in the hunt to track down the elusive 'Captain Truth', and how the same photographs were clearly in contravention of the Obscene Publications Act which had been cynically used to obtain a search warrant (there is no power to search premises under the Race Relations Act).

The chief prosecuting police officer, Inspector Edwardson of Scotland Yard's Community Relations branch, (now rewarded by promotion to Chief Inspector at Kennington Police Station) demonstrated that there is something more slimy than a wet jellyfish.

The remaining fifteen police officers all agreed that absolutely no visible signs of racial hatred had been observed at NF street paper sales all over London, including Brick Lane (with a "large Bengali population"). However a catalogue of complaints was described: one blond, white woman (refused to be identified), Upminster Labour Party, and loony Bernie Grant's Haringey Council.

Then came the turn of Joe Pearce: "we tell the truth, racial violence occurs and only we tell the truth, other papers refuse to, people must be told the truth."

Mr Collins: "Well, er, yes, but, well, I mean, it's not very nice, is it?

Ian Anderson rammed home the message: we lay out the facts and then draw conclusions, what can possibly be wrong with that? If the facts of multiracial Britain are unpleasant, don't blame us, blame the people who created this nightmare.

The jury were seen to be nodding in agreement, things were looking good. The Judge, to be fair, was only marginally biased, however all was to no avail, another twelve British men and women duly demonstrated that they will only wake up when the rioting takes place in their living room, and not just on their television.

Verdict: Ian Anderson: Not Guilty as there was not a scrap of evidence.

Joe Pearce: Guilty of telling the truth – 12 months imprisonment.

Chief Inspector Edwardson slunk out of the back entrance of the Court to avoid angry British patriots.

Overall result: a battle lost, but we will win the war.

NEW NF CHAIRMAN

ON FRIDAY, 10th January Martin Wingfield was elected unopposed as the Chairman of the National Directorate of the National Front. He replaces Ian Anderson who stood down as Chairman on completion of his term of office.

Martin Wingfield

Martin has been a tower of strength to the Party in Sussex for several years. His production of Sussex Front, one of the best local publications the Party has ever had, displayed his literary skills, and he became Editor of National Front News at the start of 1984. His enthusiasm and tireless effort enabled NF News to rapidly double in size, and increase the regularity of its production.

In 1985 Martin was given a vicious £1,500 fine under the notorious Race Act simply for making forthright comments on the effects mass coloured immigration would have on Brighton. As a man of courage and integrity Martin refused to pay the fine, rightly believing he had done nothing wrong. Consequently he had to face last Christmas in prison, and was only released early in January.

Nationalism Today* gives Martin Wingfield its best wishes for the future. We feel certain that he will prove a worthy and successful Chairman.

ARMED FORCES

Dear Sir,

I'm serving in the Armed Forces at the moment and so cannot give my identity, because I would be discharged from the Forcesfor having "sympathetic tendencies towards an extreme movement (their words not mine).

We in the Armed Forces are all professionals at our trade, and could be of use to the Nationalist Movement, while still being employed by the Government.

It's better to have anonymous friends in this sort of oeganisation, than have them speak their minds, get booted out and let some marxist have the play of the field.

We're here when you need us. I hope you can print this letter so it can encourage Forces personnel everywhere.

"A Gunner".

EDITOR'S NOTE. The National Front has always welcomed the support of Armed Services personnel. We will of course always maintain the confidentiality of any serviceman or woman who contacts us.

A WOMAN'S PLACE . . .

Dear Editor,

I recently read an article in issue number 33 of Nationalism Today by Jackie Griffin called 'Women in the Front'. I fully support what Jackie wrote and only hope that more and more of the Front's female members take note of what Jackie wrote.

As a mother of two, and, having been elected the National Front Liverpool Branch's first woman organiser since the party's inception in the city, I fully understand the role that women can play in our national struggle.

Women in the Front can no longer go on expecting the men to do all the 'dirty' work of leafletting and postering, etc. We, the women of the Front, must equal and perhaps better the efforts of our menfolk. Women must become more willing to take part on committees, make decisions and ultimately carry out those decisions on the streets of our battered homeland. It isn't simply a question of adding a 'woman's touch' to the National Front, but more importantly, it is showing to those within the NF and outside, that as radical nationalist women, we are no longer prepared to sit back and just tend and comfort our scarred and wounded menfolk on the frontline.

Women have their place in all revolutionary movements, and the National Front is no exception.

Let our enemies take heed – the women of the Front are on the march!

Yours sincerely,

Ms V. Edwards,
Liverpool.

PENSIONER

Dear Sir,

As a pensioner who suffers from osteoarthritis, I regret that I am unable to be as active as younger members. However, I do admire those who are activists and I can only put my money where my mouth is.

I enclose £20 further donation from my pension to the only party which has the guts to speak out against the evil of mass immigration which has "swamped" (Mrs Thatcher's term) our towns.

Are you aware that the Commission of Racial Equality operates discrimination by employing 50% Blacks when at the same time they suggest that about 5% of the UK's population is Black? The lucrative jobs with them provide for many £20,000pa jobs, 6 weeks paid holiday, non-contributory indexed-linked pension at 60. You can see that they have a vested interest in justifying their most lucrative race relation industry jobs.

Yours sincerely,

S. Gibson,
Essex.

BRAINWASHING

Dear NT,

In one week's TV viewing recently I noted the following:

1) CORONATION ST. The most widely viewed TV programme in Britain. The episode in question had industrial trouble at the clothing factory. Male employee (White) had been a 'blackleg' at a previous place of employment. Women workforce on finding out about this threatened to strike if he was not sacked. The only woman to speak out for him was a black girl of course.

2) BROOKSIDE. Channel 4's twice weekly soap. Two young lads decide to augment their dole money by selling bin liners door to door. Kind Black boy is castigated by uncaring White boy for giving bin liners free of charge to OAP's.

3) EASTENDERS. In the first episode an old White man is found dying. As far as his white neighbours are concerned it is 'good riddance'. All is not complete gloom however for the kindly Asians at the corner shop have reported his non-appearance.

4) GEMS. ITV's new afternoon rag trade series off on another tack. Two brothers (White) are running a clothing business. One of their sub-contractors is a harrassed looking young Black woman. Villainous brothers beat her down in price she gets for clothes made. She is of course greatly distressed as she cares deeply for her work force and the low wages she is forced to pay them.

These few examples I have given may seem stupid and inconsequential but as these programmes are seen by a large percentage of our population it must be seen as a kind of brainwashing. Some people easily accept these soap operas as real life gospel. Such is the invidious nature of the Box. Readers might like to keep a pen and paper by their side when watching TV. See what you can uncover from the devious minds of the people who run our Media.

Tom Holmes,
Great Yarmouth.

STAR LETTER

THIS months winner of the Letter of the 'Month' £5 Nationalist Books voucher was Mr. S Strachan whose letter was published in the Croydon Post. Send any letters you have published to – NT, P.O. Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk, NR3 2AH.

Understanding from NF

WHILE it is true that Tory and Liberal / SDP politicians in Waddon have nothing to compare with Labour's Advice Centre as Tony Slatcher recently stated, it is equally true that there are a number of local problems that Labour are either unaware of or deliberately ignore.

For example, in addition to our recent campaign for better housing and the installation of entry-phones in the tower blocks we have also offered our help to people suffering from drug addiction.

The Labour Party do not care about these issues because they are not "vote-winners"

Moreover, their interest in white residents who are subjected to racially motivated attacks is non-existent and if someone confided their fears of riots in Croydon to a Labour member the reaction would be positively hostile.

Unsavoury though it may seem to Mr Slatcher, people do regard crime and drug abuse as important issues and they also know that they can get a more understanding and sympathetic response from the National Front.

STUART STRACHAN,
Secretary, Croydon NF.

RAT CHAT

The Black Rat scuttles through the political sewer.

LIFE WASN'T MEANT TO BE EASY (FOR OTHERS)

Thatcher is my Shepherd. I cannot get work
She maketh me lie down on park benches
She leadeth me beside still factories
She restoreth my Faith in the Labour Party
She guideth me in the path of unemployment.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of employment agencies
I shall still be hungry
For I fear they are evil and against me
Howe has annointed my income with taxes.
My expenses over-runneth my salary
Surely poverty and hard living will follow me all the days of the Conservative Administration
5,000 years ago, Moses said, "Pick up your shovel, mount your ass, or camel, and I'll lead you to The Promised Land."
5,000 years later Thatcher said "I'll take away your shovel, sit you on your ass, make your camels too expensive, for this is the land I promised you."
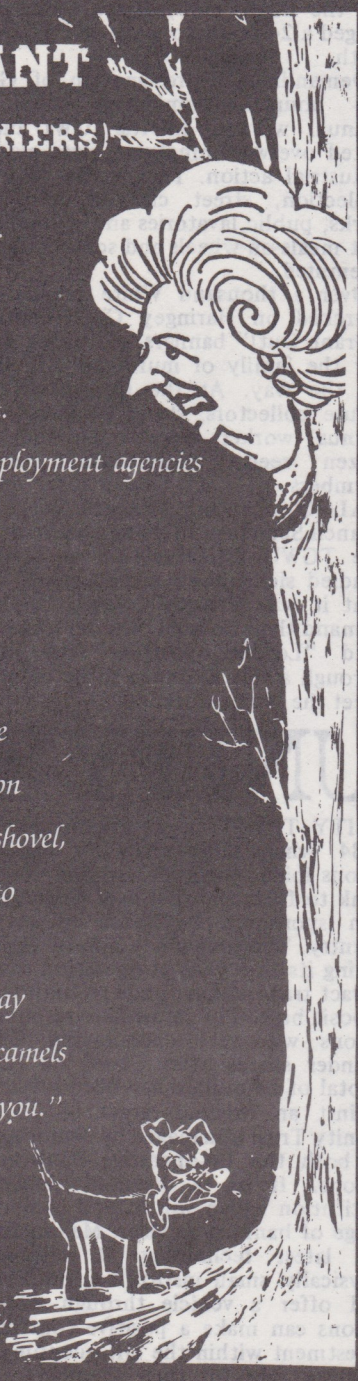
I'm glad that I am an Englishman.
So glad that I am free
BUT I wish I was a little doggie.....
AND THATCHER WAS A TREE.



LAVATORY HUMOUR

MANY "workers' revolutionary" Marxist groups in Britain are heavily populated by bourgeois "professional students" interminably "researching their thesis" for a Ph.D. doctorate. and receiving a grant, whilst spending most of their time on assorted Reddery. A classic example was Piers Corbyn, who spent several years "researching his thesis" at Imperial College, London (in fact he only turned up for students' meetings) whilst actually pursuing a career as London's Chief Squatter, leading assorted leftie bourgeois "squats" around the capital. But at least in the U.K. you have to propose a vaguely credible subject for your thesis, and you will fail if you submit blatant tripe.

Not so in Sweden, a country widely suspected of being an invention of Channel 4. Recently, for example. the Royal University of Technology in Stockholm awarded one Gudrun Linn a doctorate for a 222-page tome on the correct way to align a lavatory seat in the loo, a work described as "largely unreadable". Not to be outdone, Stina Fjeleer-Modic spent five years eating over 4,000 pork chops in order to demonstrate that a chop becomes tough and doesn't taste very nice if you cook it too long. She also concluded that pork chops should not be more than 2 centimetres thick or be left to stand in the pan more than three minutes after frying.

For this notable contribution to the sum of human knowledge, throughout which she was supported by a State student grant, Miss Fjeller-Modic got her doctorate of Philosophy. Another recently passed thesis concluded, after years of study at the taxpayers' expense, that old folk tend to move faster when they are in a hurry than when they aren't. Apparently the Universities dare not fail anyone for fear of student demo's, accusations of "racism and fascism" etc. And Swedish taxpayers seem not to mind, presumably because they are too busy indulging in the national pastimes of abortion, divorce, and suicide.

NO LAUGHING MATTER

BRITISH WORKERS in a Taiwanese-owned electronics factory in Shropshire have been forbidden to laugh on the job. A memorandum to department heads and supervisors issued by the management at the Telford plant of Tatung orders them to ensure workers "refrain from playing and laughing" at their work points. It also orders them to be stricter in enforcing rules forbidding drinking, eating and smoking at work – with special reference to clamping down on smoking in toilets – loitering in the factory and leaving work before the buzzer goes.

On a slightly brighter note, the management memo announces a competition amongst their 1000 workforce. It is for tidiness, and the winner will get – a Tidiness Certificate. Provided, of course, he doesn't spoil it all by laughing . . . .

Industrial Front

VICTORY TO THE MINERS

THE TRADITIONAL militancy and solidarity that typifies the Welsh coal mining community, is being shown by their brothers in the slate mines.

For 53 slate workers at Gloddfa Ganol (Welsh for Middle Mine) in Blaenau Ffestiniog, have been on strike for nearly six months. The strike centres around the scrooge mentality of Gloddfa Ganol's management.

Picket duty at Gloddfa Ganol.

For the mine is a leading tourist attraction as well as being a commercial quarry. More than 100,000 people visit it every year – each spending nearly £5 a head to inspect reconstructions of Victorian work places and living quarters.

Despite this tourist revenue – and the fact that the mine is profitable – most workers only take home £70 for a 39-hour week.

During the Miners' strike, the slate workers of Blaenau Ffestiniog 'adopted' Abernant Colliery in South Wales. Now the South Wales miners, along with other Trade Unionists, are supporting the Slate workers. Cash, food and extra pickets have all been provided.

During the strike, management have appealed for the men to go back. But they remain firm. All they are demanding is an honest day's pay for an honest day's work. And it is a call that Nationalism Today supports. We say: Support the Strike!

White Workers Fight Back!

THE WHITE manual workers employed by Haringey Council have hit back at the Black and middle-class trendy Labour Councillors who control the North London Borough. Incensed by the open gloating by the Council's Black "Leader" Bernie Grant over the Tottenham race riots and the horrible hacking to death of a young White policeman by the Black mob, White trades unionists staged a 24-hour stoppage on Friday October 11th.

Demanding the resignation of Grant and his bourgeois-Immigrant clique, White manual workers in the TGWU and NUPE voted overwhelmingly at mass meetings for industrial action. Their strike halted refuse collection, street cleaning and work in parks, public lavatories and swimming pools. but meals-on-wheels and school dinners were exempted.

Over a thousand White manual workers marched on Haringey Civic Centre under "Grant Out!" banners, collecting over £300 for the family of murdered P.C. Blakelock on the way. At the Council Offices, the refuse collectors, street cleaners and other manual workers were confronted by a few dozen seedy middle-class pen-pushers, members of the bureaucrats. association NALGO, chanting "Racists Out!" NALGO Branch Secretary Richard Cotton denounced the TGWU–NUPE action as "racist" and toadied sickenly to management, simpering that it was not for Council employees to demand their Council "Leader's" resignation. Said "Leader" scuttled into his office through a side entrance so he didn't have to meet the White workers.

Afterwards, Grant got his sidekick, Public Works Committee "Chair" Nigel Knowles, to begin compiling a black list of the strikers. Knowles circulated a letter to Council officials, asking them to provide the names of all their staff who had taken part in the strike. The letter said "While fully recognising the right of trades unions to take strike action, the council has a policy against racism and we take the essence of this strike to have been racist . . . we have a disciplinary procedure for such contingencies as racist activities and it will be used." Grant's sidekick went on to make another sinister threat to his White employees: he said he would "take a particular interest in the future activities of certain employees."

REAL NATURE

This affair clearly shows the real nature of today's Labour Party. It is no longer the party of the British working people and trades unionists. It is the party of the Black rioter and murderer. Whilst egging on Immigrant mobs to riot, burn and kill, all Labour has to say to White trades unionists and manual workers is – "shut up or you will be sacked".

It is surely unlikely that the White strikers of Haringey will ever vote Labour again. But they will gain nothing by voting for the equally trendy-bourgeois, pro-Immigrant SDP–Liberal Alliance. It is time for the oppressed White workers of our inner cities to rally behind the only White Workers' Party left in Britain – the National Front.

UNITY Backs Britain

UNITY TRUST began trading on May 1st 1984 when more than 30 British trade unions joined together with the Co-operative Bank to form the first ever financial institution sponsored by trade unions in this country. The immediate aim of Unity Trust during its first year of operation has been to attract trade union funds to built up a retail deposit base. The immediate response of the unions was very encouraging. When the founder shares offer closed on June 30th a total of £4 million had been subscribed for against an original target of 2.5 million.

Unity Trust is managed by senior executives of both the Co-operative Bank and trade unions. It is a licensed deposit-taking institution which will offer a comprehensive range of banking services. Making full use of the latest technology it will remain a physically small institution, but one which will offer a vehicle through which trade unions can make a positive contribution to investment within the UK economy thereby creating jobs for their members and their families both now and in the future. A wide range of services are planned for the trade union members.

Unity Trust also plans to work closely with local authorities, enterprise and development agencies and other financial institutions in order to contribute support to the industrial and service infrastructure of the UK. The latest product, Regional Investment Bonds, enables individuals and/or corporate organisations to have their savings invested within a particular region of the country. (Unity Trust is committed to investing only in the UK). This will hopefully lead to funds being directed to where they are most needed.

This is similar to the type of bank that will exist under a nationalist government. In its first year of trading it made a modest profit which will be invested back into the UK. Let's hope that this most important enterprise can keep out of internationalist hands, and keep our money where it belongs – in Britain!

N.F. ADMIN. CHANGES

GREATER SECURITY and increased efficiency. These are the results of the biggest Administrative reorganisation in the history of the National Front.

By de-centralising the Movement's administrative work, our files and assets have been dispersed so as to present a much more difficult target for Zionist arsonists and Special Branch's secret police raids. This also ensures that the growing workload of running an expanding Party is spread as widely as possible.

We ask all NT readers to note that the National Front's new administration address is:

The Secretary, P.O. Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk, NR3 2AH.

All membership dues, subscriptions to publications, Militants' Levy payments and payments for bulk supplies of NF publications should be sent to this address. All cheques/P.O's for all publications should be made payable to "Nationalist Publications". All cheques/P.O's for membership dues, donations and other payments to the NF should be made payable to "National Front – Norwich".

Any queries or complaints on administrative matters should be sent direct to the Norwich office which will deal with them by return of post whenever possible.

Literature credit items, RAC merchandise, book orders, etc will continue to be dealt with by the Nationalist Bookshop, 50 Pawsons Road, Croydon, Surrey CRO 2QF. Cheques/P.O's payable to "Nationalist Books". We advise you not to send cash if at all possible.

Although this division of labour and responsibility is very recent, it is already having a good effect on Bookshop sales and the quality of service provided by the NF Administration. With the removal of these former bottle-necks in the Party's organisation, 1986 promises to be the year when a computerised and streamlined National Front really starts to gather momentum. Join Us! Get Involved! Get Active!

WE'VE MADE IT ! Thanks to the generosity of Nationalism Today readers we have raised the £500 necessary to start producing a new range of NF policy material. The first of these will be about Ulster. IMPORTANT: NEW MEMBERSHIP REQUIRMENTS

IN FURTHER STEPS to tighten security and to ensure that control of the National Front always remains in the hands of an elite of ideologically aware activists, the new NF membership categories established by last June's Extraordinary General Meeting now come into full operation.

The membership is now separated into two categories: VOTING MEMBER and MEMBER. All those who joined before the E.G.M. (ie. those with card No.s earlier than 39636) are classed as VOTING MEMBERS. Only these people may stand for office in the Party, vote in internal elections and attend Annual General Meetings. Members who have joined more recently may apply to become Voting Members as soon as they have been paid up for more than twelve months.

Members wishing to become Voting Members should apply to do so through their Regional Organisers, or direct to the Chairman, Education and Training Dept., P.O. Box 41, Norwich, Norfolk, NR3 2AH.

All applicants will have their records of activity, commitment and grasp of NF policy examined, and must fulfill requirements for Voting Member status set by the Directorate. For 1986, the main additional requirement will be attendance at one of a series of day-long seminars which will be organised on a Regional basis from June onwards.

PHOTOGRAPHS

1986 membership cards are now available. There are different cards for Voting and non-voting Members. VOTING MEMBERS cards must carry a passport-size photo. All Voting Members renewing for 1986 must therefore send in one passport sized photo with their name and membership number marked clearly on the back. Cards will NOT be issued if photo's are not provided. This is the first time that the NF has ever used this simple security precaution, please help the Administration Department put it into operation quickly and efficiently.

Subscription rates remain unchanged from last year – £8 full rate, £5 for under 18's, those in full-time education, pensioners and the unemployed (please send a photocopy of your UB40). The usual bulk discounts for registered Branches and Groups also operate.

1985 was the best year for a long time for prompt renewals. With your help 1986 should be even better. Don't delay, renew your sub. today. Join the people who count – the active members of the National Front!
